—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

GREATER NEW YORK IS INTERESTING. From the office where this is written you see steamers headed for the lower bay and the ocean, new skyscrapers of Brooklyn, the East river, rows of big bridges, scows hauling rocks from tunnels now being excavated and big buildings in Wall Street, where they have finished a day of "highly mixed movements."

To remind you that not everything is cheerful, even in rich New York, a package lies at the edge of the water in front of the Central Vermont railway pier number 29. Under newspapers covering the package lies a man, dead.

Some time this morning, drunk with bootleg liquor, he fell into the river and was taken out at 8:45. Now it is half past four, and he still waits for somebody to take him to Potter's Field. A few weeks ago, another dead man from the river lay all day in the same place.

If that man, freed from "civilization," amounts to nothing, EVERYBODY amounts to nothing.

What happened to his soul when the water choked him happens to others that die in soft beds, surrounded by expectant heirs.

At Rome yesterday, at 11 in the morning, Mussolini entered the Vatican for the first time in his life, and signed papers restoring the Pope's temporal power, freeing the Popes from self-imposed imprisonment that has lasted 59 years.

Fifteen years ago a rampant radical, opponent of the church and organized government, Mussolini little thought that as head of the Italian government he was to sign an accord with the Pope and unlock great bronze doors opened yesterday for the first time in 59 years to signalize the Pope's personal freedom.

Beginning next week you may go from New York to Los Angeles by railroad and airplane in 48 hours. The New York Central and Pennsylvania railroads, with wide-awake presidents and financially powerful, will haul and fly you across the continent.

He is a Laborite and a Socialist, and may surprise our high finance to read that he proposes to lend British railroads public funds to modernize their equipment, thus creating work for mechanics, laborers and manufacturers.

That's not anarchy, exactly.

An UNCUT first edition of De Quincy's "Confessions of an English Opium Eater" is sold in London for $5500. That book "uncut" and consequently unread would lose value if its leaves were cut.

A book that would be worth $5500 or $55,000 in Voltaire's copy of the "Spirit of Law," by Montesquieu, with annotations in Voltaire's fine hand-writing on the margins of many pages.

That book is somewhere in Russia, taken by the Empress Catherine, with Voltaire's other books, after his death.

Richard E. Enright, for years head of New York police, says murderers should be put to work to support their families, instead of being sent to the electric chair.

Working and producing, the murderer would be more useful than lying in quicklime, outside the prison wall.

Mr. Enright also advises that thieves be imprisoned and employed long enough to make them repay those whom they have robbed.

The murderers would approve his suggestion, the thieves not.

Joseph Cohen's fish store is bombed in Chicago and he is puzzled. Usually stores are bombed when the owner declines to join associations and pay. But Mr. Cohen says, "I belong to every fish dealer's association in existence."

The National Association of Mutual Savings Banks opposes "any move to establish an alliance between savings banks and the Federal Reserve."

Savings bank depositors think such a decision should not be reached hastily.

If the Federal Reserve would let savings banks enjoy some of that 15 and 20 per cent usury prosperity and if savings banks would pass it along to depositors, they would like it.

U. S. Kin Won't Let 200 Widows Wed

Warsaw, June 8 (AP)—Two hundred widows in Poland are unable to marry because their brothers-in-law in the United States refuse to return and go through a ceremony enabling the widows to remarry whom they choose. Efforts are being made for the widows to obtain permission to visit the brothers-in-law.

Taft's Illness Due to Overexertion

Washington, June 8 (AP)—Overexertion on a recent trip to Cincinnati and gall bladder trouble have sent Chief Justice Taft to Garfield hospital here for rest and observation. Hospital authorities say he is in no danger and his condition is satisfactory. His physicians do not expect an operation will be necessary.

PADLOCK 6 'L' BILL NOW 'BOTTOMS' HOMES

The stern arm of the law descended on the picturesque "Brickbottom" and "Gold Coast" district in Somerville at noon and "padlocked" six different establishments as common liquor nuisances.

For another year "Brickbottom" owners of those buildings cannot occupy the premises, not even to make repairs. More than a score of families are allowed a "reasonable time" to get out, but if still there in another week they will be forcibly evicted and their belongings put into the street.

The district attorney's office representatives made their appeal

WIFE PREVENTS MAN'S SUICIDE

Because his wife refused to give up her two jobs, which, he said, kept her away from her five children, Frank Grey, 42, of Acorn st., Watertown, today attempted suicide at his home by swallowing poison.

His wife telephoned the police, who forced the man to take antidotes, then sent him to a hospital for observation as to his mental condition.

Gray works during daytime in a nearby radio tube factory, where his wife is employed nights. She also does general work at Harvard University in the daytime. The husband has demanded that she give up work and take care of the children who range in age from seven to 16 years.

The oldest a girl, has been taking care of the others, getting them breakfasts and sending them off to school. At noon today she had them all grouped around the dinner table and they seemed content with the sister's management.

The children defended their mother.

Gray had been out of work for some time and only recently obtained his job. He then demanded that his wife give up work, saying that he could earn enough for all

Stork Visits Exiled Afghanistan Queen

London, June 8 (INS) Ex-Queen Souriya of Afghanistan has given birth to a daughter, a Central News dispatch from Bombay stated today. Queen Souriya and her family, as well as King Amanuliah, are in Bombay in exile, following the monarch's unsuccessful attempt to win back his throne from the usurper, Bacha-I-Sakao, now known as the Amir Habibullah.

Races Burning Auto to Fire Station

Discovering his automobile was ablaze while driving along Broadway, Somerville, Isadore Chalfine, 22 Marshal st., Somerville, put on all speed and drove his car through Union sq. to a Somerville fire department station, where an engine company crew extinguished the flames. Damage was estimated at $50.

'L' BILL NOW GOES TO ALLEN

Passed by overwhelming majorities in both the House and Senate, the Elevated referendum bill now goes to the Governor for executive action.

The Senate adopted the measure by a vote of 30 to 1, while the House voted 187 to 55 in its favor despite the charge that the bill was the "work of highly trained minds."

The lone opponent to the referendum in the Senate was Senator Joseph R. Cotton of Lexington, Republican "die-hard" for the policy of public ownership of the system, whose district is but indirectly concerned with the Elevated problem.

The charge that "highly trained minds" drew the bill was made by Representative Martin Hays of Brighton, who added it did not come from Springfield, Brookline or Dedham residences of several members of the conference committee.

'SNIPPER' CLIPS GIRL'S BRAID

A "snipper" in the Park street subway station today clipped a 10 inch braid of hair from the head of Ellen Troy, 11, of Pine st., Arlington, as she was about to board a car for her home.

Frightened when she discovered her loss, the girl made no outcry and her assailant escaped in the subway jam.

Her father, Frank Troy, notified Boston police of the occurrence and said his daughter described the "snipper" as of short build, hatless, and wearing a dark brown suit.

HARRY THAW'S MOTHER DYING

Pittsburgh, June 8 (INS) — A crisis in the illness of Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, 88, mother of Harry K. Thaw, was expected today at her home. Mrs. Thaw, an invalid for three years due to an injury to her hip, contracted pneumonia on Sunday. Today her condition was described as "low."

All of the Thaw children, Mrs. Alice Copley, former Countess of Yarmouth, Countess Margaret Carrow de Perigney, Josiah Copley and Harry K. are hurrying to her bedside.

High Tide Fails to Float U. S. Gunboat

Shanghai, June 8 (AP)—Efforts at high tide to pull the United States gunboat Luzon off the breakwater near Woosung failed. Another attempt was to be made later today. The gunboat was beached Wednesday night when returning from target practice.

Hoover Off for His Fishing Stream

"HE WOKE US IN THE FIRE"

FIREMAN HURT AT BLAZE

A number of families fled, a fireman was injured and the entire district was threatened when a three-alarm fire of undetermined origin swept the top floor of the three and a half story wooden apartment house at 118 Franklin st., Brookline, today.

By the time the firemen had arrived the flames had eaten through the roof, and spread to the roof of No. 120, next door, where they were extinguished with slight damage.

The fire started in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy, on the third floor of 118 Franklin st. The Murphys were eating lunch when Mrs. Murphy smelled smoke and, investigating, found the upper portion of the apartment ablaze. At the same time a passerby saw smoke and gave the alarm.

Mrs. Mary Britt, 80-year-old grandmother of Murphy, was assisted to the street by her son, followed by Mrs. Murphy, all going to the homes of neighbors. The families of Mrs. Mary Kelly on the second floor and Mr. and Mrs. John Ahearn on the first floor also fled.

When Deputy Chief McDonald arrived flames were belching from windows and roof and a second and third alarms were sounded, bringing additional apparatus with Chief Allen, who took charge. Engine 28 from Jamaica Plain also responded.

In the meantime, the fire had spread to the three-story apartment house at 120 Franklin st., kindling the roof, and forcing out the families of John C. Curry and Daniel J. Desmond.

The blaze was extinguished at 120 before it attained much headway, but the firemen had a stubborn battle with the flames raging in the roof of 118 before they were brought under control.

Patrick McCarthy of Engine 1, while working in the attic, ran into a door and injured his wrist, which was believed to have been fractured. He was taken to the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

WINTHROP FIRE ROUTS SCORE

Nine families were driven into the street, a fireman was injured and the Winthrop fire department were given a hard battle to check flames that swept through Constitution Hall, Winthrop, early today, menacing a crowded section. A smouldering cigarette was believed to have caused the fire.

Flames had gained considerable headway on the side of the building adjacent to the Lewis Block, an eight-family apartment house that stands at Shirley st. and Washington ave.

HOUSE PASSES ELEVATED BILL AFTER HOT FINAL DAY DEBATE

MEASURE ATTACKED BY HAYS

Hiss Hays deplored the action of the committee, declaring it represented nothing "but an amalgamation of those in favor of public control and those in favor of public ownership—an unholy wedlock."

Without such an amalgamation, he said, the bill would never have come to the House, which with the Senate had showed itself in favor of returning the road to private ownership.

PROFIT ALL GONE.

"Street railway transportation as a money-making proposition is gone yet we must have mass transportation."

The debate was opened by Representative Albert F. Bigelow of Brookline, one of the conferees, who briefly analyzed the bill. It by the State, would be turned over the subways of Boston if the mayor and city council approved.

When this action was taken, he said, the Cambridge tunnel, owned by the State, would be turned over to the district council, consisting of mayors and chairmen of boards of selectmen, who would be practically limited to deciding what extensions should be made. The Legislature would retain the authority to approve such extensions.

SCORES DEFERRED ACTION

Representative Eliot Wadsworth of Boston, one of the foremost advocates of private ownership, said the report of the conferees was a surprise to him. He said the Legislature had been urged to take some action on the Legislative Department. Bigelow plainly stated action would be postponed for two years.

The referendum, he said, bound nobody, and could not possibly be acted on by the voters with any great knowledge. The bill, he declared, constituted an admission the Legislature was not able to come to a decision.

He charged that the board of trustees would be merely a planning board, and there is already a Metropolitan Planning Board. As no action is to be taken for two years, he asked why things were not left as they are.

Representative Henry L. Shattuck, in favoring the bill, declared a splendid report had been made by the committee. He went into the bill in detail. He said the setting up of a district was necessary, no matter what plan was adopted.

FAVOR REFERENDUM.

He preferred taking one bite at a time, he said, and this was a foundation.

It would be an insult to the people of the district, who have been rehabilitating the road by paying their dimes into it for the last 20 or 11 years, he said, to go back to private ownership without consulting them. With the referendum on the ballot in 1930 he predicted the campaign that year would be one of the most notable in the history of Massachusetts.

Representative Leo Birmingham of Brighton, minority floor leader, favored the conference report. He said he favors referendum to the people, and believes they are intelligent and can be trusted to decide what is right.

Representative James J. Twohig of South Boston, a public ownership advocate, said that if power of termination is served in a referendum, what would we have then? "We are doing nothing for the next years," he declared. "The man who says the people are not to be trusted is not worthy of being trusted himself."

House Pays Tribute to Eliot Wadsworth

The House of Representatives today paid a tribute to one of its members, Representative Eliot Wadsworth of Boston, who has been signally honored by President Hoover. Wadsworth has been selected to represent this country at the Geneva Red Cross conference.

After Representative Alfred W. Ingalls of Lynn had drawn the attention of the House to the appointment the members stood and cheered Wadsworth for several minutes.

In replying briefly to the tribute of his colleagues, Wadsworth declared the work ahead at the conference, that of rewriting the international document under which Red Cross works in times of war and for the care of prisoners, to be a very interesting work. He said some kind of a protocol is to be drawn up to establish the rights of such prisoners.

Hoover's "Vacation" to Be Week-Enders

Washington, June 8 (AP)—President Hoover, "condemned to work this summer and stay in Washington," has no plans for an extended vacation, even though Congress does take a recess. As far as he can see his vacation is already underway, in the form of week-end visits to his fishing preserves near Frederick, Md., and at the headwaters of the Rapidan river in the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia, where he goes today.

Brutal Hammer Slaying Laid to Mate of Victim

George J. Breton, shown leaving Methuen home with policeman, is accused of beating his wife over the head while she slept and then igniting the bed in an effort to cover the crime. Ten-year-old Sadie Breton, daughter of the couple, is fondling Babe, her pet Boston terrier, which spread the alarm of fire too late to save Mrs. Breton. In upper insert is Alfred Breton, brother of the man accused of the slaying. Lower insert is photo of Joseph Tessier, fire chauffeur, who dragged Mrs. Breton's body from blazing bed. (Staff photos.)

M'DONALD AND CABINET IN FULL SWING

London, June 8 (AP). The new labor cabinet of Ramsay MacDonald was in full office today.

Members went to Windsor Castle paid their respects to King George and returned to London hearing the seals of office, which the retiring Conservative government members has surrendered.

"My colleagues and I were highly delighted to find the King looking so well and to see how magnificently he was able to go through the ceremony without any suggestion of strain," said Mr. MacDonald afterward. "Everything went off smoothly."

The ceremony took place in the audience room of the Castle after a meeting of the Privy Council, presided over by the King, was held to swear in the new members. The King received the cabinet one by one. Lord Parmoor, lord president of the council, was first to receive his seal, followed by the lord chancellor, Sir John Sankey, who was given the Great seal of England. Mr. MacDonald was next and then came the others in order of precedence.

Miss Margaret Bondfield was the calmest member.

I am not a bit excited," she said later. "After 40 years of blazing the trail, one ceases to be excited about things. Of course I am very highly honored that I am the first woman member of the cabinet and I am particularly pleased to think I will now have the opportunity to get right down to work with a problem which has always interested me."

American Fails in Labor Parley

Geneva, June 8 (AP)—Andrew Furuseth, attending the international labor conference here as a representative of the International Seamen's Union of America, has failed to get a hearing before the committee dealing with loading and unloading ships. Mr. Furuseth gave the committee a typewritten statement criticising the draft convention before the conference. The committee, however, refused to have this proies translated into official languages for distribution.

"Flivver Plane" Is Placed on Market at Bargain Rate

Chicago, June 8 (AP)—The mail order airplane—a "flivver" of the skies, routing, knocked down, less than the lowest price automobile—has been placed on sale by a Chicago mail order house.

All necessary parts and a kit for assembling the plane may be purchased under $500. Completely assembled, tuned up, with gasoline in the tank, ready to fly, the monoplane costs less than $1000.

President of I. T. & T. Becomes Chairman

New York, June 8 (AP)—Sosthenes Behn, heretofore New York president of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., was elected chairman of the board today. He will be succeeded as president by Hernand Behn, who has served as executive vice-president.

LABORERS TO TRY LEAD CORSET MAN TESTS AGAIN

Laborers who failed in the recent physical examinations conducted by the civil service for Essex will be reexamined next Thursday afternoon at Everett City Hall.

The new tests were arranged for at a conference between Representative Elmer E. Spear of Everett and Civil Service Commissioner Elliot H. Goodwin.

The examinations will be conducted by Dr. Ernest H. F. Sheldon, assistant physical inspector of the department of civil service. Commissioner Goodwin said he'll be present.

Officers Probed

Salem, June 8 Marshal Daniel Phalen has admitted that he is investigating charges of assault, robbery and drunkenness against two reserve officers.

LEAD CORSET MAN SAYS 'NOT GUILTY'

George D. Wyeth, "the man in the lead corset," of Cross st., Somerville, pleaded not guilty to a charge of larceny of 20 pounds of lead in East Cambridge district court today. The case was continued until June 11 and Wyeth was held in $1,000 bail.

Police say Wyeth was arrested when his stiff manner of walking aroused the suspicions of Patrolman Mulvihill. They claim he had a sheet of lead weighing 16 pounds wrapped around his waist like a corset, and another 14 pound piece in his lunch box.

FIRE DEATH PLEA 'NOT GUILTY'

Methuen, June 8—George J. Breton, 44, Methuen mill hand, pleaded not guilty in Lawrence District Court today to the charge of murdering his wife, Carolina, 30, whose battered body was dragged from a blazing bed in their Barker st. home.

Disheveled and unshaven after a sleepless night in a Methuen police cell, Breton appeared before Associate Justice Albert G. Pierce without counsel and took no further part in the court proceedings after declaring himself innocent of the murder.

On motion of Asst. Dist. Atty. Charles A. Clifford, the court granted a continuance until June 19, held Breton without bail and ordered his removal to the Lawrence House of Correction.

Police seeking a motive for the alleged crime, say it may have been jealousy. They say also that Mrs. Breton carried life insurance policies.

The slain woman was the mother of a 10-year-old daughter. The latter had left for school before the tragedy occurred.

Mrs. Breton's death was discovered when firemen, summoned by an alarm, went to the Breton home to battle a blaze in the bedroom. They saw the victim's form on the bed. Joseph Tessier, a fireman, dashed through the flames and took the woman's body to the kitchen. He was badly burned about the hands.

Mrs. Breton was taken at once to Lawrence General Hospital, but was dead upon arrival there. Medical Examiner Victor A. Reed found her skull had been fractured.

CONFLICTING STORIES

Breton told two versions of what happened when he discovered the fire, according to the police. He declared that he went back to bed after his daughter went to school. He is employed nights in the Arlington Mills, but did not work Thursday night as there was no work for him. He went to sleep, he claims, and knew nothing more until the smell of smoke aroused him.

He later changed the story, the police say, and declared that he was awakened by the barking of their Boston terrier puppies.

GAVE FALSE ALARM

When he discovered the place on fire he claims he tried to get into his wife's room, but was driven back by the flames. So he went out through the front door of the house and shouted to some neighbors, who sounded the alarm.

Breton was not burned, the police say.

Firemen, in an effort to ascertain the cause of the blaze, discovered traces of kerosene on the bedcloth-ing and then noticed blood on the pillowslips. Breton admitted there was a gallon bottle of kerosene in the house. The bottle, when it was found, the bottle was almost empty.

9 FAMILIES FLEE WINTHROP FIRE

ocean, the flames threatened to sweep through the unoccupied hall to the residences nearby. Families in the Lewis block fled to the street.

Horseman Albert J. "Jerry" Wyman of Engine 1, Winthrop, injured an ankle when he fell into a hole while fighting the fire.

Constitution Hall, originally erected as one of the show places in Winthrop many years ago by a former town official, is now occupied by business places and a club.

A fruit store on the ground floor, owned by Mario Conti, was destroyed. The Winthrop Beach Bowling Alleys, which occupy the rear of the hall on the ground floor, suffered heavy damage from flames and water. The upper floor, occupied by the Winthrop Athletic Club and a pool room, was badly damaged.

The families of Mr. and Mrs C. Whitney, whose homes are in the Lewis block, were forced to flee.

Others who reside in the Lewis Block are Mr. and Mrs. James McKay, Rev. and Mrs. Ralph J. Horton and two children, Dr. John R. Waugh and Mr. and Mrs. Haldorsen.

The wooden frame two story structure on the west side of Constitution Hall, occupied on the second floor by Mr. and Mrs. Morris M. Bornstein and four children, was also menaced.

The Bornstein family was aroused by the persistent barking of Brownie, pet dog. A member of the family got up to quiet the dog and discovered the fire.

Investigation to determine the cause will be made by fire officials today.

Machold Surprises Leaders by Quitting

New York, June 8 (AP)—The decision of H. Edmund Machold to resign as chairman of the Republican State committee and devote his time entirely to business, came as a surprise to most Republican leaders here today. The resignation, it is announced, will be formally tendered late this month. There have been few conjectures as to his successor, but the general belief here is that an up-State leader will be selected.

Edison Knocks Off Work to Present Diplomas

Fort Myers, Fla., June 8 (AP)—Thomas A. Edison, who recently started a search for a boy to succeed him as a creative genius, has found youth more important than his workshop.

Last night the inventor clipped three hours from his working day to present diplomas to 72 seniors of the Fort Myers high school.

Mrs. Edison, a national leader in social welfare work, delivered the commencement address.

6 BRICKBOTTOM HOMES LOCKED FOR A YEAR

ance at exactly 12:30 o'clock, in one instance an owner of an apartment house of 22 families was affected by the ruling.

LOSES LONG FIGHT

"Brickbottom" did not take her defeat without a bitter struggle. The fight began last August when lower courts designated these houses as liquor nuisances. The owners carried their appeal through to the highest courts of the state, and yesterday the Supreme court reaffirmed the decision to padlock.

Today those padlocked were:

CALLS IT "UNFAIR"

This brings the total of padlocked establishments in "Brickbottom" to ten during the past year, as four others were previously locked. The procedure in the case of each padlock sometimes pictured in the movies, but a typewritten note tacked on the door of the building.

When Pascale Reale was notified that his buildings had been padlocked, he merely shrugged his shoulders and smiled, saying: "Go ahead."

He had thought the order suffered only to one of his establishments, but when he learned it included the whole block of 22 apartments, he was not so cheerful.

"That's unfair," was his logic.

The officers were amused when they padlocked the Ward st. home of Mrs. Maria Develais. She came to the door and grinned as the notice was tacked up, ordering her out and closing the house for a year.

POLICE PRAISED

"Oh, sure, sure," she said. "I own lots of houses."

She continued to grin as the officers departed down the street.

District Attorney Bushnell today ordered the release of the six state troopers who have been guarding these establishments since last August, to prevent liquor being sold there while the cases were in court.

"Not one single instance of neglect of duty by these state troopers in this case has come to my attention," wrote the district attorney in praising the men.

Deputy Sheriff J. Fiske Ford and Assistant District Attorney Fay A. Crafts, putting on the padlock notices, were accompanied by local and state police.

New Curb July 1 on Visitors to Canada

Montreal, Que., June 8 (INS)—American citizens returning from Canada after July 1 will find the procedure more complicated than before, because the immigration document known as Form 521, requiring registration and examination, will go into effect on that day, United States Commissioner H. B. Landis announced today.

JAIL 44 IN MILL WAR; ONE DIES

Gastonia, N. C., June 8 (AP)—One man was dead and three others today were in hospitals, two of them in a critical condition, a fifth was nursing bird shot wounds and 44 members of the National Textile Union were in custody charged with assault with intent to kill as a result of a fight between guards about the strikers' tent colony and city policemen.

The city, which for several hours was thrown into a turmoil had grown calm with rapid work by special police detectives in rounding up suspects.

Of five wounded men, Chief of Police O. L. Aderholt died from his wounds. He was shot in the back. Attending physicians said he had probably 50 bird shot in his lungs.

A. J. Roach, a patrolman, was peppered by scores of shot and was regarded as in a serious condition, while it was expected Patrolman Tom Gilbert would recover. Patrolman Charles Ferguson had a number of shot in his arm and shoulder, and Joseph Harrison of Passaic, N. J., who claims to be a National Textile Workers' Union organizer, was struck in the arm and side.

Amy Schechter, in charge of the International Workers' relief store at the camp; Vera Bush, a local strike leader, and several other women were among those held in the city and county jails. Miss Schechter and Miss Bush are charged with assault with deadly weapons, as are most of the other prisoners.

PLAN BENEFIT FOR IRISH FAIR LOSERS

Performers in the Irish Fair, left flat without their wages by the promoter, Freeman Bernstein of New York, were given a chance by Sheldon Fairbanks, manager of Boston Garden, to recoup some of their losses. Fairbanks, it was announced, has donated the use of the Garden, free of charge, to the performers, and a meeting of some of the leaders of musicians, singers and dancers was held to plan for such a event, which will take place Thursday night.

It is planned so to conduct the finances of the affair that everyone who lost from the week's venture at the Garden, conducted by Bernstein, will get back from the men who had the job of cleaning the Garden nights to the vaudevillers.

Torch Slayer to Go on Trial Monday

Elizabeth, N. J., June 8 (INS)—New Jersey's alleged "torch murderer," Henry Colin Campbell, 41 year old engineer, publicity man and sales promoter, will go on trial in the supreme court on Monday charged with shooting Mrs. Mildred Mowry to death, then soaking her clothing with kerosene and setting fire to her body on fire. Campbell pleaded insanity.

Police Chief, 60, Shoots Himself

Gloucester City, N. J., June 8 (AP)—Charles J. Van Meter, chief of police of Gloucester City for 15 years, shot himself to death in his home today. He was 60.

Friends believe he became despondent because of the Camden county grand jury's investigation of gambling, crime and vice in Gloucester. He had been called before the grand jury twice recently.

Trio Forfeit $4500 Bail in Rum Case

Franklin, June 8 (AP)—Bail totaling $4500 was forfeited today by three men arrested two weeks ago in a raid of a $25,000 distilling plant in a barn here. The men, who gave their names as Frank Trimback, Herman Schultz and George Kopstock, posted $1500 each for their appearance in court today.

FLAG WINNERS IN BALTIMORE TODAY

Baltimore, June 8—Still expressing amazement at the wonders of New York, 36 patriotic pilgrims, the regional winners of the national essay contest conducted by the United States Flag Association, arrived in Baltimore today.

Fatigued from the constant rush which their three-day program in New York had called for, they were of one voice in declaring it had all been too short. They were reluctant to leave the metropolis—there was so much still to be seen.

From Baltimore the patriotic pilgrimage takes them on to Washington tonight. They will spend a full week at the Nation's capital, their tour of historic Eastern cities coming to its climax next Friday, Flag Day, when the final competition will be held on the steps of the Capitol.

The winners of the national contest—two boys and two girls—will receive as their reward a four month trip around the world.

Leading up to this climax will be a series of events in Washington that will prove no little consolation to those who fail to win the national championships. They will visit all the historic sites in and around Washington and will be introduced to President Hoover on Wednesday.

Colonel James A. Moss, U. S. A. retired, President General of the United States Flag Association, is leader of the pilgrimage. The contest was sponsored by the Hearst papers.

POLICE SAY SHE ADMITS MANY OFFENSES

The story of a mother who is alleged to have turned thief to feed her child, was revealed today with the arrest of Mrs. Marl L. Roberts Buck, 39, of Pleasant st., Stoneham, charged in 30 counts with larceny from Cambridge apartment houses of letters containing checks she is alleged to have cashed.

"A woman will do most anything for her dependent child," she is said to have told the police.

The arrest was made by Inspector John Neilan of the Cambridge police, assisted by Postoffice Inspector Hunt.

According to police, the woman, while being fingerprinted and photographed at Cambridge headquarters, made a confession, declaring she stole the letters and cashed the checks for her child.

She refused to give details regarding the child, but said her husband was living apart from her according to police. She was arraigned in East Cambridge court and held in $300 for a hearing one week from today. In the meantime it is understood action will be taken against her in federal court.

According to police, the thefts have been going on since last April the locality being Massachusetts ave., near Porter station, and in Langdon st., where there are numerous apartment houses.

The checks, ranging in value from $15 to $90, police say, were cashed in a bank and in stores on Boston, Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and Cambridge and in dressmaking establishments.

MOVE AGAINST TOWN HINTED IN SLAYINGS

Concord, N. H., June 8—That some action might be taken against the town of Contoocook because of permitting the liberty of Raymond Conway, 35-year-old recluse, who killed himself after coldly murdering his next door neighbor, Ray Barton, father of two small children, was freely hinted by citizens.

Conway shot down his neighbor without warning, after first preparing a grave for him, and then retreated to his tumble-down shack where he wounded himself fatally by firing twice from a single-barrel shotgun.

It was revealed today that on two occasions warrants were issued for Conway as results of his mad "spell." As long ago as May, 1927, the eccentric was brought to this city on a complaint issued by Herbert W. Rainie, then county solicitor.

At that time he was examined by two physicians, Dr. Clarence E. Butterfield and Dr. Walter C. Howe of Concord, who decided that he was harmless and allowed him to return to his home. Four months later he was again arrested and, on a charge of disturbing the peace of the quiet community of Contoocook, was fined and given a six months' suspended jail sentence.

BOYS BENT ON ENLISTING AT FORT BANKS

Frustrated in their attempt to enlist in the army because the office at Fort Banks was closed, two 11-year-old Chelsea lads decided to escape out behind the battery station of the Narrow Gauge this morning, when they planned to try again.

The boys, William Skorsky, 37 Pine st., and Samuel Kipar, 92 Arlington st., were found wrapped in a blanket salvaged from an ash can by Patrolman John Gallagher of Winthrop.

They told Gallagher they left home Friday to enlist, but when they arrived at the gate at Fort Banks the guard told them the office was closed and to go home. However, their desire was to enlist and not to go home so they decided to wait.

CRIME BOARD IS 'BAFFLED' BY LACK OF DATA

Washington, June 8 (INS)—President Hoover's law enforcement commission is encountering rough going in its quest of the causes and curatives of American lawlessness.

This much was candidly admitted today by former Atty.-Gen. George W. Wickersham, the chairman. After numerous meetings, he described the task set out by President Hoover as "baffling and perplexing," and ordered another 10 days' recess so the commission can get together enough data to make a start.

The principal difficulty, the chairman said, is the lack of reliable statistics on the crime situation.

"There are 48 states and the federal jurisdiction," Mr. Wickersham said. "Yet there is no place where statistics concerning crime are assembled, to which one can go and read them as one would read health statistics."

To try and get a start the commission is going to the courts and the police bureaus of the country for their figures. The work of assembling these figures is a slow and laborious process, and one that accordingly is filled with liability of error. However, Mr. Wickersham said, a start must be made.

RUNAWAY AUTO TRUCK IN 25 FOOT DIVE

The brakes, supposedly released by boys, a laundry wagon parked beside the Somerville High School gymnasium, Medford st., Somerville, careened for 100 yards down the steep embankment from the school, crossed the street, plunged through a wooden fence and tumbled 25 feet to the track of the Boston & Maine Railroad.

A wrecking crew of the railroad was working a short distance away and men were rushed to the scene.

After learning that no one was pinned beneath the wreckage the crew began the removal of the debris.

Ralph Button, 4 Virginia ave., Somerville, driver of the truck, told the police he left the truck with brakes set while he made a delivery in the gymnasium. He said he warned several boys in the vicinity not to go near the truck.

Fat Cops Are Easy Marks, Must Lose Ton a Month

Chicago, June 8 (INS)—Two thousand corpulent Chicago coppers must shed a ton of fat a month, under an order promulgated today by Police Comr. Russell.

Slim policemen, Russell said, are more efficient, handsomer and healthier. Incidentally that they make poorer targets for bullets.

No hit-or-miss system for reducing will be employed, Russell confessed with Health Comr. Arnold Regel on ways and means of lightening bluecoats' belts.

Each obese cop will be expected to lose a pound a month.

LINDY AND ANNE SAFE ALONE IN MAINE FOG

By ARTHUR QUINN,
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Boothbay Harbor, Me., June 8—A big June moon, romantically stirring the rippling waves, may make a honeymoon setting for Tom or Dick or Harry and their brides, but—

From the point of view of Charles A. and Anne Morrow Lindbergh there's nothing quite so cozy as a nice, damp, sticky—and absolutely opaque—fog.

Happily isolated today somewhere out in the misty privacy of Boothbay Harbor, Lindy and his brand new wife were enjoying to the utmost a temporary invisibility afforded them by atmospheric conditions.

Fog shrouded the little power cruiser, Mouette, soon after the craft, with Lindbergh himself at the helm, was seen to pass Point Pemaquid here, heading presumably for a harbor anchorage.

William Winspeare, airplane pilot for the Curtiss Flying Service of New York, was the keen-eyed scout who saw the Mouette arrive, but not even airplanes could peek thereafter at the floating love-nest of Anne and Charles.

Fog wrapped them round about and even stilled the betraying sound of their chugging motor. The small army of reporters, who forced by a naval auxiliary of photographers in launches and tugboats, was definitely checkmated, at least for the time being.

From Boothbay Harbor to North Haven is only about 25 miles, an easy three-hour jaunt for the well-powered Mouette.

Shattuck to Keep Legislative Post

In the course of the debate in the House on the municipal lighting bill Rep. Henry L. Shattuck of Boston took occasion to announce that he would return next year to finish his two-year term. Shattuck said that he would be on hand in 1930 to take part in further legislation "notwithstanding all rumors to the contrary."

Sell Ludendorf 'Gold Brick' for $600,000

Munich, Germany, June 8 (AP)—The machinery of German justice has reached into Italy and snared a barnaid and plumber's assistant charged with enlisting Gen. Erich Ludendorf, Germany's wartime quartermaster chief, on an alchemy scheme.

Franz Tausend, the plumber's helper, and Therese Tausend, barmaid, were indicted over to German police at the border of the Italian Tyrol and brought here for investigation.

According to the current story, the man and the woman persuaded the general that Tausend was a doctor of chemistry and had discovered a process for making gold.

Ludendorf saw in the scheme a possibility of manufacturing the metal in sufficient quantities to free Germany from dependence on foreign money and he aided the Tausends to erect a laboratory near Munich.

Work was carried on there until the couple disappeared, taking with them, it is alleged, most of the money subscribed for the enterprise, almost $600,000. Ludendorf was one of the chief victims.

500 BOYS TAKE PART IN Y.M.C.A. FIELD DAY

With more than 500 youngsters up to 13 years of age from all of the Greater Boston Y. M. C. A.'s in attendance the 7th annual field day of the associated "Y's" was held today at Franklin Field.

More than 50 events were run off during the day and the affair was to last until this evening.

In the 40-yard events in class A, Charles Winchester of the Somerville Y. M. C. A. was awarded first prize in the 100-yard dash. In class B, 100-yard dash, Ivan Wingwood of the Boston Y captured first honors, in the 40-yard dash, events under 98 pounds, George Windsor of Boston Y was first, while Ernest Miller of the Somerville Y was first in the same event for all contestants over 98 pounds.

The following were in charge of the field day events: Lesser Updergraph, boys' work secretary of the Somerville Y. M. C. A.; Harry Wheaton of the Cambridge association, Norman Luidlow of Dorchester Y. M. C. A., Donald Mathison of the Somerville Y. M. C. A. and Stuart Scott, physical director of the Huntington branch of the Boston Y. M. C. A.

BOY SAVED IN AUTO RACE WITH DEATH

New Bedford, June 8—Paul Warren of Provincetown won a race with death when he drove from Provincetown to Hyannis, a distance of 51 miles in 55 minutes.

In Warren's car was six-year-old Tendall Cass, son of Dr. Frank Cass, of Provincetown. The boy was suffering from a hemorrhage brought on by a tonsil operation a few days before.

Although the lad bled freely all the way, once Warren brought his charge to the Cape Cod Hospital, Dr. Leighton Johnson, of the Boston Homeopathic Hospital, who had performed the operation was able to stop the flow of blood.

'KIDNAP' NOTE LEFT BY GIRL

Centerville, Md., June 8 (AP)—Discovery of an abandoned automobile in which was found a scrawled note that said that Laura Fatch, 19, a Washington College senior had been kidnaped, spurred search for the girl which began yesterday. Her father found the automobile early today, on an old dirt road.

The note read in part: "I've been forced out of the car by some people who say they are going to take me. They have sworn that no hurt will come to me, two men and two women. They say I can write to you."

'THUMBS' RIDE; IS DYING

Thumbing a ride" may cost the life of Charles Mantenuto, 18, of 10 Pearl av., Watertown, who is at the Waltham Hospital dying from a fractured skull.

On the way to the high school, where he is a popular student and member of the baseball team, Mantenuto hailed a passing Boston express truck driven by Frank A. Luongo of 373 Riversida ave., Medford. The driver informed police he slowed down to two miles an hour to allow the boy to get on the truck.

The boy started to climb on, but slipped and fell. A wheel of the three-ton machine passed over his head and crushed it badly. The accident occurred on Mt. Auburn st., in Watertown, near Patten st.

U. S. Revises Quarantine

Washington, June 8 (AP)—Secretary Hyde today revised the Mediterranean fruit fly quarantine to forbid reshipment of Florida fruits and vegetables from Northern and Northeastern states into the South and West.

Tonic Men Pay

Willebrandt Lauded by Head of W. C. T. U.

Evanston, Ill., June 8 (AP)—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, has sent letter, to presidents of all the State W. C. T. U. organizations, lauding the work of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt while Assistant United States Attorney-General in charge of law enforcement.

Mrs. Boole said the W. C. T. U. should deeply regret Mrs. Willebrandt's resignation, but should not be "deceived by the wet propaganda to the effect that her work was unsatisfactory to President Hoover or Attorney General Mitchell."

The resignation of Mrs. Willebrandt, the letter read, does not mean that "the President has in any way lowered his attitude on law enforcement. He will seek to find a worthy successor who, with him, wants prohibition to succeed.

Mrs. Boole said the W. C. T. U. had no reason to fear the anti-prohibition organizations of women known as the women's moderation union and the women's organization for national prohibition reform.

She said the W. C. T. U. would continue to "expose the 'real character" of such organizations, and carry on its own work of educating, agitating and organization for prohibition.

New York Student Elected at Harvard

William D. Vogel of New York, Harvard junior, yesterday was elected vice-president of the Harvard Union, Harvard's largest undergraduate club, William D. Stone, graduate secretary of the Union announced.

Vice-president is the only position on the board of governors of the Union open to undergraduates, and is filled annually by a post-prom election among the 2000 or so men who constitute the Union's membership.

Baptists Report Loss of 400,000

Denver, Colo., June 8 (AP)—Approximately 400,000 members of the Baptist faith have severed their connection with the church in the last 15 years, it is shown in a survey prepared for presentation to the Northern Baptist convention which convenes in Denver next week. The survey also reveals that ministers still remain the lowest paid class of men in the nation.

'Hit-Run Launch' Master Fined $500

Eugene Lizotte of Tiverton, R. I., owner and master of the gas screw launch Overland, paid a $500 fine in Federal District Court after pleading guilty to a charge of failing to stop to be questioned when ordered to by an officer of Coast Guard cutter 133, about 12 miles off the Massachusetts coast.

The Overland, it is alleged, sank a fishing boat in Boothbay Harbor two months ago, leaving the crew to be saved by others.

Dartmouth Athlete Goes Home by Plane

Hanover, N. H., June 8—The modern way to travel home from college was evidenced when Charles Goldsmith, star track man at Dartmouth, finished his last examination and stepped into his brother's airplane to be taken to his home in New York. The arrival of the airplane came as a surprise to Goldsmith, but he hastily packed and was off.

Rattlesnake Killed in Blue Hill Reserve

One of the young men heard the snake's warning rattle. They gave chase and after cornering it, killed it with a stone and clubs.

7 POWER TRUST PROBERS TO BE PICKED SOON

A thorough probe of the activities of the Power Trust in Massachusetts will be made by a special commission of seven, composed of one member of the Senate, three of the House and three appointed by Governor Allen.

The resolve creating the commission, and appropriating $20,000 for the expense of the investigation, has been signed by Governor Allen.

The makeup of the investigating commission is expected to be named shortly by the governor, President Gaspar G. Bacon of the Senate, and by Speaker Leverett Saltonstall of the House.

The governor is expected to sign the municipal light bill, which was accepted by the legislature after one of the most bitter fights of the session today.

Chairman Henry C. Attwill of the public utilities commission, opponent of the bill, is understood to be willing to accept the bill, which was mutilated to considerable extent by the Senate, as a first step to a more liberal law in 1930.

That such a fight will be waged is asserted by the statement of Rep Henry L. Shattuck of Boston.

He described the bill as having "one tooth" for the protection of the public against exceptionate rates of the private lighting companies. The "one tooth" of the teeth, he said, will be fought for at the next session.

Maine Towns Given Electrical Power

Augusta, Me., June 8—A decision was rendered by the Public Utilities Commission, authorizing the Consolidated Power Co. to furnish electrical service in Somerset County to New Portland and also to customers in Anson and Embden, New Vineyard, Strong, Farmington Industry, Temple, Weld and Wilton.

U. S. MOVES TO SPEED UP TAX DECISIONS

Washington, June 8 (INS)—Further decentralization of the Internal Revenue Bureau directed toward settlement of income, corporation and other tax cases in the field outside of Washington was announced today at the Treasury.

Field branches of the general counsel's office have been opened in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Boston, Pittsburgh, Miami, Seattle and St. Paul, giving taxpayers in these sections of the country the opportunity for more prompt settlement of cases.

The order also sets up a direct liaison between the Treasury and Justice Department in prosecuting tax frauds and defending tax suits against the Government.

Local tax experts from the office of General Counsel C. M. Chaest were assigned to the field branches. The primary function of these attorneys, the announcement said, was to advise collectors of internal revenue and field forces on questions of law, thus making possible the elimination of erroneous rulings and consequently recourse by taxpayers to the courts and board of tax appeals.

Because of the congestion in the tax board and the large number of cases reaching federal courts, the Treasury Department has launched a campaign to settle cases through agreement. Practically 90 per cent of the refunds and other adjustments announced since the publicity system was established in April, represented compromises.

PAPAL ENVOY IN MEXICO TODAY

Mexico City, June 8 (AP)—Mexican churchmen, both lay and clerical, have great expectations of happy ending to conferences between government officials and Vatican representatives next week. Looking to settlement of the church-state problem in this country.

A statement by President Emilio Portes Gil last night confirming the impending negotiations, left them in formality which generally was accepted as auguring well for the outcome.

The President said: "Archbishop Ruiz requested an interview with me through our embassy at Washington, which request I have granted."

Suicide Leaves His Body to a Good Clinic

New York, June 8 (INS)—"Be sure and examine my ears," wrote Louis Golden, and then, fixing a sash rope around his neck, he hanged himself.

Golden, who was an electrical engineer, had complained of noises in his ears for considerable time.

"Please give my body to a good clinic and be sure they examine my ears and also my stomach."

Aided by a youth to whom he loaned his gun and whistle and by a girl who raced away by automobile to bring reinforcements, Patrolman William MacDonald of the Lynn police today captured two alleged burglars, both said to be wanted for a series of safe-cracking jobs in Haverhill, Lawrence and Lowell.

MacDonald reports he surprised the two yeggs as they were attempting to open a safe in the office of the Lovers Leap Bottling Co. on Linwood st., West Lynn.

They plunged toward the door as MacDonald opened fire. Heading off the fugitives, the patrolman grappled with one of them. He subdued his prisoner and handcuffed him. The other intruder had found temporary refuge somewhere in the dark interior of the building.

Dragging his captive to the rear door, the only available exit, Officer MacDonald hailed a passing automobile, driven by Albert Courchesne of Coburn st., Lynn.

MacDonald gave him his revolver and his police whistle, and told him to guard the captured yegg.

Courchesne's girl companion, acting under the officer's orders, drove the auto in search of a telephone to summon police help.

MacDonald charged back into the unlighted building unarmed. He found burglar number two crouching on top of a pile of tonic boxes.

The prisoners identified themselves at Alfred White, 22, and Charles J. Vyenbeck, 25, both of Haverhill. Police say they admitted robbing safes in Haverhill, Lawrence and Lowell.

They were held for the grand jury on charges of breaking and entering in the night time, attempted larceny and possessing burglar tools. Judge Judah Reed in the Lynn district court.

Haverhill Man Held in $1500 Robbery

Haverhill, June 8—Dexter Reed, 26, of New st., Haverhill, was arrested today as an alleged accomplice in the $1500 robbery two weeks ago at the Wason & MacDonald dairy in this city.

Reed was implicated in the break in an alleged confession to Lynn police by Alfred J. White of Haverhill, under arrest for an attempted break in the Lovers Leap Bottling Company plant in Lynn.

BERLIN PAPERS BITTER OVER REPARATIONS

Berlin, June 8 (AP)—Press comment in Berlin was generally adverse today on the publication of the new Young plan for reparations.

The Nationalist Deutsche Zeitung says defiantly: "We fling a flat No! at this makeshift solution and all constitutional forces will be justified to destroy it even against the government's will."

The Nationalist Lokalanzeiger pictures Germany a wanderer from one mirage an another. It says Woodrow Wilson once put a bottomless pit in the reparations barrel into which thirty or forty billion marks have disappeared. We are obliged to pay another 35 billions but henceforth every mark will lessen our debt and tend to bring the day of liberation closer."

American Delegation Sails From Cherbourg

M. C. O. F., Knights, Ladies Plan Outing

Arrangements for the annual outing of the Knights and Ladies of St. Rose at Canobasett will be made at a special meeting tomorrow night in their headquarters, Worcester st., South End. The organization, second degree of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, has tentatively set Sunday, July 21, for the outing. The committee included Miss Mary Harrington, John Burdge, Mary E. F. Digan, John H. Mullen, Garrett H. Keefe, Annie V. Kelley, Matthew Hayes, Michael Hurley, John J. Sheehan, John H. Mullen, Thomas P. McNamara and Daniel H. McCormack.

Sees Father Slain

Toledo, O., June 8—While his daughter, 11, looked on, Earl S. (Ike") Bracker, 38, alleged Toledo liquor baron, was "put on the spot" and shot and killed in the driveway to his fashionable residence by two rival gangsters.

SOCIETY ATTENDS WEDDINGS OF SEVERAL OF ITS FAVORITES TODAY

Miss Isabel Shaw Bride in Concord Ceremony; Miss Frances Duncan Weed Weds in Longwood Church

ONE OF SOCIETY'S IMPORTANT WEDDINGS TODAY IS BEING solemnized not only very quietly but with a purring motor at the church door and a bride leaving the altar in smart traveling costume. Miss Isabel Shaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Mott Shaw of Nine Acre Corner, Concord, becomes the bride of Gideon Knapp de Forest of New York in First Parish Church at Concord late this afternoon, with only the immediate families attending. Summer motor trails, with no set itinerary, are the only plans for the immediate future.

FOUR O'CLOCK WEDDING BELLS RING IN THE FLOWER-DECKED Church of Our Saviour in Longwood for the brilliant ceremony which unites Miss Frances Duncan Weed of Brookline and Lawrence O. Pratt of Beacon st., Boston. Miss Weed murmurs her "I will" in a gown of ivory satin, made with long, tight sleeves and draped front, and trimmed at throat and wrists with rare old family lace. Her tulle veil is caught by a lace band over her hair. The Rev. Henry McF. Miller, the rector, performs the rites before a distinguished company of Boston's elite.

MISS MARY WEED, SISTER OF THE BRIDE, FILLS THE ROLE of maid of honor in gown of jade chiffon with matching horsehair hat. Corn yellow chiffon is the color motif for the six bridesmaids. Miss Martha Jarvis of Pittsburgh, Miss Sallie Lurton of Washington, Miss Alice Grew, Miss Katherine Wing and Miss Barbara Cronin of Brookline, and Miss Eleanor C. Dodge of Boston. Mr. Pratt has his brother, Henry N. Pratt of New York, as best man. Upon their return from the honeymoon the new home will be established in Boston.

IN SPRINGFIELD THIS AFTERNOON ANOTHER SOCIETY WEDDING occurs when Reynold G. Clark of Brookline takes Miss Eleanor Brown of that town as his bride in South Congregational Church. This is a wedding of color symphonies, with the bride in ivory satin and her six lovely attendants in beige lace over orchid chiffon with matching felt hats. Mrs. J. Scott Parrish of New York, a sister of the bride, is her matron of honor, in gown if beige lace over green chiffon. John Taylor Clark attends his brother as best man.

ALTHOUGH MRS. LARZ ANDERSON IS STILL ABROAD, HER beautiful Brookline place is to be opened on June 17 for the annual show of the Ladies' Dog Club. And this will be a very smart affair indeed, with the aristocracy of dogdom assembled with owners whose every move is chronicled at fashion resorts at home and abroad. This club, organized by a group of Boston women, now boasts a national membership with many elite exhibitors. Mrs. Michael Van Buren of Newport, with her famous pekingese kennels, Miss Alice Brown of Providence with her scotties, Mrs. William S. Barr of Baltimore with chows, Mrs. Lindsley Tappin, the Misses DeCoppet and Mrs. M. P. Murphy of New York and Mrs. Hartley M. Dodge (Geraldine Rockefeller) of Madison, N. J., will be among those contributing to about 500 entries.

MISS JEAN HINKLE, MISS MARY WINTERS, MISS ELIZABETH Q. HUNTINGTON, Mrs. Henry Parsons King, Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Mrs. Bayard Warren and Miss Sylvia Warren, Mrs. E. C. Storrow, Mrs. Adnah Neyhart and Mrs. Charles Aldrich are among the Boston competitors for blue ribbons. Other owners of thoroughbred beauties include Mrs. Franklin Dexter, Mrs. William Dexter, Mrs. F. J. Stimson, Mrs. Conrad Perkins Hathaway and Miss Elizabeth Loring. Mrs. William Marcy Shrewsbury, Mrs. Charles F. Breed of Swampscott and Mrs. Homer Gage of Worcester have entries. The Faulkner Hospital is to receive each dollar collected by the club, which stages the show on the last day of the races, that society may see it and have luncheon on the grounds before the afternoon race events.

AS THE LAST RAIL IS TOPPED AND THE FINAL BLUE RIBBON awarded today at Waveney Farm, Framingham, society puts down the record of one of the most successful horse shows that the Millwood Hunt has ever staged. Climaxing the two-day event's with a brilliant gathering of exhibitors for luncheon, Reginald Bird goes down as horse show history as one of the most genial of hosts, and his daughters, Miss Betty and Miss Patricia, as true daughters of a great sportsman. Nellie Morse brought home the blue ribbon and cup for jumpers under Miss Betty Bird's handling, and Miss Lydia Lund won the blue ribbon for ladies' side saddle class with Clytin yesterday. Miss Sally Sprague, Miss Anna C. Danforth, Miss Florence Lindsay and Miss Dorothy Neyhart were among the other competitors for trophies today.

THE PRINTED LIST OF NEXT SEASON'S DEBUTANTES IS out today and it contains no less than 142 names! Miss Helen B. Allen of 180 Commonwealth ave, is the only representative in the As.

State Memorial Forest Planned by Massachusetts Clubwomen

WITH the approval of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the endorsement of the Massachusetts Federation, Mrs. Daniel M. Goodridge of Newton, State chairman of the Department of Conservation, has set herself to the accomplishment of a Memorial State Forest.

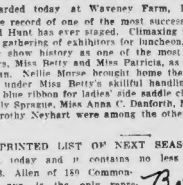
For years she has dreamed this beautiful idea. For years she has laid plans and during the summer the ground work will have been set for active pursuit of such a noble project in the early fall.

The purchase of a State reservation will be accomplished through contributions from the clubwomen of the State.

Next, there will be a forest but a centrally located spot, easily accessible from every part of the State where children as well as the adult devotees of wild life may spend vacation days with the birds and the trees and the flowers.

For there is to be built on the spot a house where the clubwomen may rest, where lectures on the great outdoors may be given, and where clubs may plan an outing or a forest picnic.

Such is the plan of Mrs. Goodridge and such it will be in reality in the near future.



Mrs. Daniel M. Goodridge (Bachrach)

Additions may be made annually, Mrs. Goodridge explained, in talking about her "dream project."

Those conservation and wild-life programs may be carried out with real ceremony when this State Memorial has finally been bought and sealed and delivered to the clubwomen of the Commonwealth.

During the summer months many of the clubs interested vitally in conservation and more particularly in this Memorial project have pledged themselves to the raising of substantial amounts which they are to contribute in the fall.

The junior clubs, so recently made a vital part of the State Federation, Mrs. Goodridge said, are enthusiastic about the State Forest movement and have signified as their approval of the project a pledge to plant a tree every year.

The whole movement was born of the ingenuity of Mrs. Goodridge, who has done much along similar conservation lines in her own community.

"A State Memorial Forest has been my dream for years," she confided. "I've waited and waited until I thought the time was right and at the Biennial Council at Swampscott recently, the General Federation gave me its hearty approval and told me to go ahead. Mrs. Packard and the State organization had already endorsed the idea."

The spot for such a memorial has as yet not been decided upon, but it is certain that wherever it is it will be within approach of the entire State and best fitted to meet the demands of scenic beauty, value for money paid and quiet commemorating such a brilliant suggestion.

Mrs. Packard, State president, and a group of prominent women will make the final decision as to location and price, and their conclusions will be made public at a later date.

The committee assisting in Mrs. Henry A. Burnham of Newtonville, Mrs. George E. Churchill of Amherst, Mrs. Wallace R. Conant of Concord, Mrs. Edward C. Greene of Weston, Mrs. Alice B. Harrington of Boston, Mrs. Thomas Ringer of Fall River, Miss Elizabeth Hubbard of Boston, Mrs. James N. Smith of Evanston, Mrs. Hollis Webster of Lexington, Miss Lilly S. Tobey of Boston, Mrs. James Wheeler of Natick, Mrs. Francis E. Wilson of Andover and Mrs. Richard W. Wyman of Framingham.

DAUGHTERS OF UNION VETERANS

The Massachusetts Daughters of Union Veterans will hold exemplifications of the ritual at several places within the next few days. The first was at Reading today. Tomorrow an interesting program will be conducted at the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea in observance of Fathers' Day. Exercises will open at 2:30 p. m. and will be under the direction of the chairman of the Soldiers' Home Committee, Mrs. Winifred Paine of Arlington.

BETH ISRAEL HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

Next Monday the life members of the Beth Israel Hospital auxiliary will hold a luncheon and entertainment, headed by the president, Mrs. I. K. E. Prager. The life membership club of this organization is an active body and numbers 149 women.

The auxiliary, which has a membership of close to 900 women, maintains the out-patient department of the Beth Israel Hospital.

Mrs. Albert R. Rosenthal, Mrs. Harry Wyner, Mrs. D. Sendzenie, Mrs. A. L. Gordon, Mrs. John Slater and Mrs. Armin Klein have charge of Monday's arrangements.

GENERAL FEDERATION

Achievements are done to be copied by admiring people and so we print three more states and their deeds of community service as reported by directors at the General Federation of Women's Clubs' biennial council.

TENNESSEE—The Federation of Women's Clubs of this state is working on a health badge plan, Mrs. Eldran Rogers of Memphis told the convention. Put out by Dr. E. L. Bishop of the state department of health, when completed, the health badge plan will mean that every child has had a thorough physical examination and physical defects remedied.

VIRGINIA—"We work to reduce illiteracy in Virginia," Mrs. J. Allison Hudges of Richmond stated. "The individual clubs and districts have scholarships and are helping many girls and few boys to obtain not only an education but a Christian education."

WASHINGTON — The greatest united effort ever made by the clubwomen of this state was the raising in two years the necessary $30,000 with which was purchased 62 acres of the "finest remaining Douglas fir virgin forest" of the northwest, Mrs. H. E. Maltby of Seattle recited. This was presented to the State as a gift from the Washington Federation of Women's Clubs, she said.

N. E. MINISTER WAITS DEATH WITH SMILE

Chicago, June 8 (AP)—Down into the silences of the "Valley of Death" walks Dr. Ozora S. Davis, a Vermont Yankee, who once preached in Newton, Mass., to meet a friend—alone, fearless, confident.

Victim of an incurable malady, the noted theologian has heard surgeons pass a final sentence upon him—a year, perhaps longer, perhaps only a few days, and then the book ends.

But there is no fear in the heart of this gentle, snowy-haired veteran of the pulpit, who rose from a shoeless, penniless newsboy to become moderator of the Congregational church and president of one of its chief fountain heads, The Chicago Theological Seminary.

He has now become president-emeritus of the seminary. His hand is steady, his eye twinkling clear and his laughter hearty as he sits talking of what he has seen in his 62 years, and of tomorrow.

"The young people today are the finest I have known," he said. "They are more honest, fearless, more trustworthy. They do some things that make me shiver, but they insist on doing their own thinking, for which I thank God.

"Some time ago I sat next to President Coolidge at a banquet. He was in office then. I brought home a picture taken at the banquet, showing Mr. Coolidge and me. I said: 'There was a time when I didn't have shoes.' America is the only land where I could do that."

Dr. Davis' parents were poor. The wages of a baggageman in a little Vermont town 60 years ago weren't much. So Ozora sold papers at White River Junction. There he learned to read the clicks of a telegraph key and worked his way through Dartmouth—"every cent."

KIDDIES SAIL; PARENTS RACE AFTER LINER

New York, June 8 (INS)—Mr. and Mrs. A. Ronald Tree of New York, Virginia, London and Northampton, England, are safe aboard the Olympic, bound for Europe today, after a narrow escape which almost resulted in their family being split up on the high seas.

Thinking the Olympic sailed at midnight, Mr. and Mrs. Tree, the latter formerly the wife of Marshall Field, Jr., of Chicago, took in a theater. Meanwhile, their two children, Michael and Jeremy, and servants sailed on the liner at the scheduled time of 11 p. m.

Mrs. Tree almost collapsed when she learned her family had departed, owing to the fact that her son, Michael, is just recovering from a serious illness. The case was explained to the marine superintendent, who sent a line and a wireless to Capt. William T. Parker of the Olympic to hold the vessel at Quarantine until Mrs. Tree arrived. An hour later the Trees arrived in a specially chartered tug.

$23,000 VERDICT FOR HOUSEKEEPER

Providence, June 8—A Superior Court jury awarded $23,000 to Miss Lillian E. Whittaker of Cranston in her suit against William F. Wells, administrator of the estate of the late Charles E. Barlow, for services to Barlow and his mother for 32 years.

Miss Whittaker had sued for $30,000, alleging that from 1898 to the time of Barlow's death in 1926, she had cared for his mother, who was her aunt, and later for Barlow himself, whom she served as confidential secretary, bookkeeper and housekeeper, in addition to contributing her own money to Barlow's education and for household expenses.

Testing Effect of Wind on Zeppelin

Friedrichshafen, Germany, June 8 (AP)—Special tests are now being made to try the effect of winds of varying velocities on motors of the Graf Zeppelin in an effort to determine whether the wrong motor in a recent unsuccessful start of the ship for the United States.

The defects are now thought to lie only in the propeller shaft clutch on the propeller.

Pilot, Falls Out, Novice Lands Plane

Le Bourget, France, June 8 (AP)—Deserted in an airplane when his pilot, Lieut. Cellier, fell out while attempting to parachute to the ground, Lieut. Ivonnet, observer, who knew naught of piloting, did something or other to the dual control apparatus that brought the plane down in a creek, smashing it, but escaping injury.

Seek Identity of Victim in Niagara

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 8 (INS)—Police today were endeavoring to learn the identity of a man drowned when struck by a Niagara Gorge railroad trolley car on the lower river bank and buried into the swift running stream.

PROSPERITY OF NATION LAUDED AT G. O. P. FETE

Ripon, Wis., June 8—Tranquil Ripon bustled and bulged with five times its normal population today as steadfast Republicans from near and far climaxed the celebration of the 76th anniversary of their party.

This is a big day in the history of Ripon, whose bid to fame rests in its claim that it cradled the G. O. P. in a tiny wooden schoolhouse.

Highlights in the exercises were a monster parade led by an elephant and an address by Secretary of War James W. Good in an amphitheater augmented with bleachers to seat 20,000.

Headed by Governor Walter J. Kohler, the entire Wisconsin Legislature was on hand to entertain visiting Republicans.

Ripon's claim to being the birthplace of the party is disputed by Jackson, Mich.; Bloomington, Ill., and Kansas City, Mo., each of which places plan a diamond jubilee celebration of its own.

Secretary Good declared that through Republican leadership the country reached its present state of prosperity, contentment and well being.

"The Republican party, born of people who brushed aside the petty bickerings and strife and the selfishness of personal ambitions, will continue to advance human welfare so that the comforts and joys of American life may become the common enjoyment of all," Secretary Good said.

Recounting the growth of the party, he sought to put at rest the claims of various cities as the birthplace of the party by quoting a publication issued by the Republican National Committee in 1924, which gave Ripon credit for harboring the men who gave the party its name and who first merged the old political faiths.

"Nowhere do we find a great nationally known figure as the founder of the Republican party truly that party sprang from the people," he said.

PASTOR, GIRL NOW DECIDE THEY'LL WED

Andover, June 8—The Rev. Robert S. Hall, 24, a student of Boston University Theological school, and Miss Dorothy E. Hill, 21, of Chestnut st., this town, who were "talked out of marriage" several weeks ago, have finally decided definitely to take the step without the advice of friends.

According to reports of friends of the couple in this town, the marriage will take place in the near future in the Episcopal Church here.

Miss Hill, who is secretary to Miss Katherine Hewett, executive of the Church Home Society of Mr. Vernon st., Boston, and the Rev. Mr. Hall filed marriage intentions in Boston City Hall on May 4 of this year, the wedding planned to take place within a few days.

It was then, according to Miss Hall, that she was strongly advised against marrying so soon and also before Mr. Hall had obtained a pulpit.

The couple finally agreed that perhaps it was wise to postpone the marriage for a time and cancelled the license application at Boston City Hall.

Since that time the Rev. Mr. Hill has received a call to a summer pulpit in a town in New Hampshire, and as a result the couple visited City Hall again and filed their second license application.

College Librarians Meet in Worcester

Worcester, June 8—The 25th anniversary of the New England College Librarians' Association was opened at Clark University with a dinner in Estabrook Hall and a round-table discussion of library problems in Geography Hall attended by 40 members.

The principal address was by Dr. Harry L. Koopman, librarian at Brown University. Koopman paid special tribute to the veteran college librarians who gave their services during the past year, Dr. Louis N. Wilson of Clark University, Prof. William James of Wesleyan and Prof. William C. Lane of Harvard.

1055 Free Church Folk Tour Canada

On Board the S. S. Doris, St Lawrence River, June 8 (AP)—Pilgrims from the British Free Church numbering 1055 were making preparations today to begin the first day of their week's stay in Canada, following arrival in Montreal harbor early with you Quebec and Ontario in the interests of church union.

Ford, With "a Song," Buys a Dozen of Ancient Coaches

Saugerties, N. Y., June 8 (AP)—Customer and seller are both pleased. An automobile dealer, a former liveryman, has sold "one a song" a dozen swanky coaches a century or more old used for funerals and parades.

He is glad to get use of the storage space. The purchaser, Henry Ford, is delighted to add to his collection of American antiques.

TELLS COUNCIL TO LEAN MORE ON YOUNG MEN

Manchester, Vt., June 8 (AP)—The 15th quarterly meeting of the New England Council was told that the "progressiveness and aggressiveness of young men should be given more recognition in New England business and industry."

E. C. Johnson, vice-president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, voiced that belief in an address devoted to a description of conditions he found them in the South and West in the course of the recent 12,000-mile "land cruise" of members of his organization. Johnson led the cruise.

YOUTHFUL LEADERS.

"We were impressed with the youth of the business leaders we met," said Mr. Johnson. He declared many of the chambers of commerce visited seemed to have stronger financial support than similar bodies in New England and to be more appreciated by the communities they served.

Nevertheless, the speaker declared, New Englanders had no reason to be "apologetic or defeatest," but rather had ample ground for enthusiasm and ought to advertise the merits of their section and its products even more widely than at present.

HIGH QUALITY LABOR.

Henry S. Dennison, Framingham, Mass., manufacturer and author of the section on "management" in the recent report of the commission on economic changes, of which President Hoover is chairman, declared that the most important of New England's many advantages as a manufacturing area, was the quality of her labor forces.

"If for no other reason, the value of her labor resources forces upon New England particularly the necessity for scientific thinking on human problems," he said. "New England cannot afford not to capitalize to the full the heritage which has fallen her lot.

NEW FINANCE PLAN.

"She cannot afford to be handicapped by less than the best that scientific thinking can bring to bear in the utilization of that heritage."

At yesterday's opening session considerable interest was aroused by the public announcement of the organization of New England Industries, Inc., a corporation sponsored by the council through which small New England industries may obtain permanent financing.

The corporation will have an initial paid up capital of $500,000. Incorporation papers were filed in Massachusetts. Temporarily, at least, the members of the organization committee, are to constitute the board of directors.

Girl Students March in Brookline Class Day

For the first time in the history of the school, rain cut short the colorful class day exercises of Brookline high school on the Cypress st. playground. These pretty juniors, however, carried out their part of the program before the torrent descended. They acted as aids and marshals. (Staff photo.)

EX-KAISER PLOT FAILS; CHIEF LOSES JOB

Berlin, June 8—Royalist ventures into the realm of high finance, a scheme for the restoration of former Kaiser Wilhelm to his throne, machinations of a commoner, and political intrigue centering about Princess Hermine are all woven into a story in the Berliner Tageblatt, from which the conclusion is drawn that all is not well at Doorn.

The Tageblatt recalls that two and a half years ago Wilhelm dismissed his business manager, Herr von Berg. In the latter's place a certain Herr Nitz was appointed. It is revealed now that Herr Nitz has been relieved of his duties by the ex-kaiser, and thereby hangs the tale. The Tageblatt cites reports to the effect that the real cause of Von Berg's downfall was his opposition to the ex-kaiser's remarriage. Likewise, it is disclosed that Herr Nitz' selection was made in compliance with the wishes of Princess Hermine.

His appointment, however, was made principally on the strength of his assurances that he could put Wilhelm back on the throne. It was these promises that won Princess Hermine to his support. As a result of his assurances, considerable financial resources were placed at his disposal by the former German emperor.

Omission of Free State Song Splits Trinity College

Dublin, Irish Free State, June 8 (AP)—A matter of a song, "God Save the King," or "The Soldier's Song," may complicate the annual festivities of Trinity College next week.

James MacNeil, Governor General of the Irish Free State, may not attend the Trinity exercises because the school authorities insist on having "God Save the King" sung, instead of the National Free State Song.

"The Soldier's Song" is the hymn of the Sinn Fein. It never has been played at Trinity College.

TROTZKY SEEKS REFUGE IN ENGLAND

Constantinople, June 8 (AP)—Leon Trotzky, former Red army leader, who is now in exile here, today asked Premier MacDonald, Great Britain's new labor prime minister, for authorization to visit England "for urgent medical treatment and scientific work."

After Trotzky had sent a telegram to Mr. MacDonald, the exiled Russian's son gave the British consul at Pera a letter from his father, asking a visa on the grounds of the necessity for very urgent medical treatment and the desire to survey the publication of his autobiography in English.

Ever since Trotzky was banished from Russia and sent to Constantinople he has been making efforts to find a sanctuary in some city where he could obtain medical advice.

He particularly desired to go to Germany where he might consult the German doctors who originally operated upon him, but the Berlin cabinet, after much discussion, eventually decided to bar him.

Trotzky was very bitter over the German denial and settled down in the Pera region of Constantinople to write a book on the situation in Russia and the part he played in the opposition to the Stalin regime.

U. S. GIRL WEDS ITALIAN NOBLE

Rome, June 8 (INS)—A brilliant wedding of international interest took place here today when Count Francesco di Campello was married to Miss Maria Francesca Dusmet de Smounz, the daughter of Marquis and Marchioness Dusmet de Smounz.

The Marchioness was formerly Miss Edith Oliver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Oliver of Pittsburgh.

Virtually all the aristocracy of Rome was represented at the nuptials. Crown Prince Humbert of Italy came especially from Turin to attend.

6 IN LEADVILLE GUILTY IN 'CITY RUM PLOT'

Denver, June 8 (AP)—Six of twenty-six residents of Leadville, Col., indicted by a federal Grand Jury last winter on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law after the only major dry raid in the mining town's turbulent history, were convicted by a federal court jury.

Night Police Captain Tammick and City Councilman William E. Lapin, two of the six officials of the town named in the indictments, were among those convicted.

Seventeen of the defendants in the case were dismissed during the trial because of insufficient evidence, and three of those indicted, including R. J. McDonald, died before the case reached court.

Ever famous for its saloon row along Harrison ave., in the rough-and-tumble days of sudden riches and equally sudden death, the town had made a second bid for fame, United States agents said, for the quality and quantity, particularly quantity, of its moonshine.

The agents further charged that the town officials not only winked at the law violations but participated in them to the extent of charging for "protection," which money was used, among other things, to pave Harrison ave.

Leadville citizens met this particular charge with a resolution adopted shortly after the indictments which asserted that, after all, the business of town officials was to get the street paved, and how they did it was nobody's business.

The courtroom, during the three days of the trial, had the appearance of a moving picture studio, with bearded miners in corduroy, cow-punchers in ten-gallon hats and resort habitues in checked vests and black hats.

POPE TO AWARD KING AND DUCE HIGH HONORS

Vatican City, June 8 (AP)—Monsignor Francesco Borgongini Duca, only appointed papal nuncio to Italy, will be consecrated as titular Archbishop of Hegaeica on June 29 by Cardinal Gasparri in the basilica of the Holy Apostles. He will assume the functions of envoy July 1.

While the date of the King's visit to the Vatican has not been announced it was known today Pope Pius would not return the call, but would send Cardinal Gasparri, who is the papal secretary of state, instead.

Over that interchange the Pope probably will confer the Supreme Order of Christ on the King and the Order of the Golden Spur upon Premier Mussolini, these being the two highest decorations he can bestow.

King Victor Emmanuel in return probably will make Cardinal Gasparri a member of the Order of Annunziata, since it is impossible for him to offer decorations to the Pope.

84, She Gets 'Kick' Out of Crossing U. S. 173d Time

Chicago, June 8 (INS)—Refreshed by a rest here between trains, Mrs. Frank M. Jones, 84, and bright-eyed, rode eastward today on her 87th trip from Tacoma, Wash., to Saranac Lake, N. Y.

"Traveling is a great kick," she enthused, sitting in her wheel chair. "The scenery is always new, and I do so like to meet people."

HUB MAN HELD IN EXTORTION SCHEME

Hartford, Ct., June 8 (AP)—Frank J. Ferris, 23, of Boston, was arraigned in the Hartford police court today on a charge of extortion in connection with a scheme in which Mrs. Mae E. Nolan of West Hartford, wealthy widow of a local building contractor, gave up $4900 last November.

Ferris waived examination in the lower court and was bound over to the September term of the Superior Criminal court for trial. He was remanded to jail when bail fixed at $15,000 was not furnished.

LINEMAN KNOCKED OUT BY SHOCK

Knocked unconscious by an electric shock from a transmitter box at the Vine st. railroad crossing in Braintree, Walter Hollingshead, 43, of 385 Hollis ave., Braintree, was revived by prompt assistance of workmen and a physician. The lineman fell 15 feet.

After half an hour treatment by Dr. Harold Ripley of Braintree, the lineman was revived and taken to his home. He is out of danger, as the shock was not of a high voltage.

ROOSEVELT FEAST IN HUB JUNE 20

The newly established Jefferson Society of Massachusetts will tender a public dinner to Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York on Thursday, June 20, at the Statler Hotel.

LaRue Brown, president of the society, in announcing the dinner, declared all those who desire to attend will be welcomed. Among speakers will be Mrs. Jessie Woodrow Sayre and Chairman Frank J. Donahue of the Democratic State Committee. Mrs. Edward A. McLaughlin, Jr., is chairman of the dinner committee.

Stringent Dry Act to Be Filed in Wisconsin

Milwaukee, June 8 (AP)—A new prohibition law, even more stringent than the repealed Severson law, will be submitted to the next legislature, officers of the Wisconsin Anti-saloon League, declared today. F. Scott McBride, national superintendent, met with state officers to discuss Wisconsin's prohibition statues. It was said a campaign will be launched immediately to elect a dry legislature.

N. Y. Payroll Guards Foil Bandit Gang

New York, June 8 (INS)—Bandits today opened fire on a payroll car of the Schalac Construction Co. and wounded the messenger, but were beaten off in a pistol battle without getting the money.

B.&O. Would Acquire Western R.R. Control

Washington, June 8 (AP)—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad today applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to acquire control of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railroad.

Hawkins Sues Hall in $10,000 Love Theft

Jesse F. Hawkins of Weymouth has brought suit for $10,000 against Perry W. Hall of 149 Washington st., Whitman, to recover for the alleged alienation by Hall of the affections of Hattie B. Hawkins, wife of the plaintiff.

The Commonwealth Shoe and Leather Co. and the defendant Hall, as trustee of the estate of his mother, the late Abbie S. Hall, are named as trustees of property belonging to Hall.

State Pays $18,000 for J. W. Biggs Land

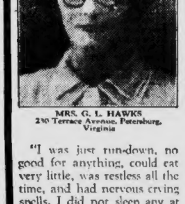
A jury in the Superior Court has awarded James W. Biggs, and his mortgagee, the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank, $18,000, for land and buildings taken by the Commonwealth for the Southern Artery. The taking was of 16,700 square feet of land on Marsh st., Dorchester. Biggs is to receive $14,747.10 and the Co-operative Bank $3252.90.

Ford's Railroad Indicted by U. S. Jury

Columbus, O., June 8 (AP)—The Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railway, Henry Ford's railroad, was indicted on 25 counts, charging violation of the Elkins act in receiving discriminatory rates for coal shipments from Kentucky to Ohio points, by a United States federal grand jury here today.

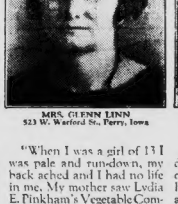
One Woman Tells Another

FAME of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound spreads from coast to coast as grateful women recommend it to their friends and neighbors.



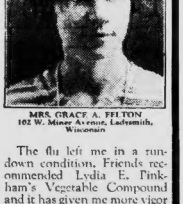
MRS. G. L. HAWKS
240 Terrace Avenue, Petersburg, Virginia

"I was just run-down, no good for anything, could eat very little, was restless all the time, and had nervous crying spells. I did not sleep any at night and just dreaded for night to come. My sister-in-law recommended the Vegetable Compound to me one day and my husband brought home a bottle, I began getting better when I was taking the second bottle and now I have a good appetite, take care of my people when they are sick and do my own work too."—Mrs. G. L. Hawks.



MRS. GLENN LINN
523 W. Warford St., Perry, Iowa

"When I was a girl of 13 I was pale and run-down, my back ached and I had no life in me. My mother saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and got it for me and after taking six bottles I was like a different person. It made me strong and well and did wonders for me. The best I can say is not enough. I took three bottles more about a year ago and it helped me again. I am taking it now in the tablet form and find it a wonderful help. I will answer letters from women about it."—Mrs. Glenn Linn.



MRS. GRACE A. FELTON
102 W. Miner Avenue, Ladysmith, Wisconsin

The flu left me in a run-down condition. Friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has given me more vigor and has helped me to be more active. I do clerical work and cleaning and pressing and I am able to work every day and to work some at home too. I used to feel so weak and tired I had to lie down often. Now I have a good appetite, my nerves are better and I feel well and strong. I recommend the Compound whenever I can, for it gives results."—Mrs. Grace A. Felton.

DRAMA FLOURISHES IN SYLVAN DELLS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

OVER winding trails, dotted with hot-dog stands and numerous wayside depots of motor service, the drama moves from the congested, sun-baked city to wide open spaces near hill and lake. The Broadway actor, if he is talented, industrious and lucky, swaps the brick pavement for meadow dew and fragrant woodlands—and keeps right on acting. That sort of thing has been going on, deep in the heart of Maine, for 29 summers. If the plodding player cannot find fair outlet for his gifts at home during the months of tan and freckles, he may reap gloriously in the arts at Lakewood, which is just next door to the ancient Indian settlement of Skowhegan.

* * *

THE Lakewood Players form a unique group in the modern theater. They act while they play; they swing the deadly nibble, dangle tempting bait before the wary bass and then, leisurely, when the sun goes down, make first-class drama for the countryside. Lakewood's drama is metropolitan; always a New York cast lays firm hands upon the scattered roles. Possibly that is the lure which coaxes mighty business from far away Portland (100 miles) and many other Maine towns of less, but still considerable distance. While Lakewood is not wholly an actors' colony, so many excellent big league players have yielded to its wilful charms, and made it their summer hunting grounds, that an organized theater just naturally germinated and grew.

Nicholas Young

NOW, let it be known, they do things well in Lakewood. No shoddy stock productions clutter the stage in the cozy birch grove; no half-hearted, uninspired attempts to do something quickly and cheaply. The Lakewood players have pride in their work; they are zealous of that effect, futile but always virtuous mem known as Broadway Reputation. The nation's best producers have sensed the economic value of this acting organization and have equipped it the company for what Mr. Robert Sparks, Lakewood's official clairvoyant, terms "pre-Broadway productions."

* * *

THE smartest of Gothamite impresarios lean heavily upon Lakewood for test, experiment and, of course, final decision. During the present season new plays will be staged for A. H. Woods, William A. Brady, Richard Herndon, William Harris, Jr., Crosby Gaige and Paul Streger. These busy giants of our elusive drama even take time to move northward when their works are on the platform. They sample the renovated spring water and then hitch back to the dusty city. Later in the year, or perhaps next year, the big time playgoer may catch his first glimpse of what the Maine native and casual wayfarer enjoyed in its virgin state.

* * *

DURING the present month Arthur Byron, Ruth Garland and Dorothy Stickney join the colony. Ernest Glendinning, now pinch-hitting for Mr. Clive at the Copley, was expected to be another early June arrival, but, as may be easily observed, "The Man Who Changed His Name" still lingers in Boston and waxes strong. Other names in the vineyard booked for later productions are Francis Wilson, Grant Mitchell, Charlotte Foster and Violet Heming. Lakewood, you may gather, fairly glistens with talent.

* * *

AS if these names were not sufficient to give impetus to any woonie of the more gainful arts, the early season records show that Lakewood already has taken to its bosom Houston Richards, William Courtleigh, Frances Bogart, Mrs. Arthur Byron, Thurston Hall and Robert Hudson. These gifted apostles of good acting have been seen and heard in the preliminary sessions. The reports from the proceedings indicate glad tidings on both sides of the footlights.

THE association of Arthur Byron with any group of actors brings its own reward, generally in the form of intelligent, dignified acting well worth any man's attention. Through the stress of many years of close observation Mr. Byron remains my favorite actor. I do not believe that in 20 years he has ever given a bad or even mediocre performance. What the talents of that type of player mean to Lakewood, calls for no explanation.

Still in the Ring

"Show Boat" at the Colonial, fourth week. Most satisfying musical play of the year. The last week.

"The Man Who Changed His Name" at the Copley. (Third week.) Mr. Clive sings his "laugh" hit for another and keeps right on making good entertainment.

Jane Cowl in "Jenny" at the Plymouth. (Third week.) Can hardly be said to stand within the general head of good morals.

KEEP COOL IS THE SLOGAN

The new B. F. Keith's announces the complete installation of the latest system for summer refrigeration, an immense cooling plant which is now in operation. Unlike many methods of refrigeration, the plant at the Keith house is of ultra-modern design, combining in its many features improvements on the older type of refrigerating apparatus.

While keeping the theater in an even temperature of comfort at all times, the mechanism of this latest device is automatically governed by the temperature out-of-doors. When the heat is excessive on the street, an appliance mechanically lowers the temperature inside the theater. As the temperature on the outside begins to drop, this same mechanism causes the temperature inside the theater to rise to a degree of warmth that increases the comfort of those in the theater.

Nearly the entire floor space in the subbasement is utilized for the many intricate mechanical phases of this newest cooling system, making it one of the largest and most complete of its kind ever installed.

CASE OF MARY GO-ROUND

Two girls with almost identical names are in the cast of "The Trial of Mary Dugan," Bayard Veiller's all-talking special, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, to be at Loew's State next week.

They are Mary Doran, who plays the hard-boiled chorus girl role, and Mary Dorne, who is seen as the Italian girl who is sentenced to death.

The similarity of names has caused the young actresses considerable difficulty since they began their careers about the same time. They have received each other's mail, telephone calls and Christmas gifts, but until assigned to the talking picturization of the famous Bayard Veiller drama, had never met or even seen each other.

Miss Doran is a contract player with the M-G-M studio and last appeared in "Broadway Melody," while Miss Dorne has never been in pictures before, having played the Italian role in the stage production of the courtroom drama.

'Glorified'

HARRIET HOCTOR, who will have leading role in Ziegfeld's "Show Girl," (Colonial, June 24.)

'THEIRS TO COMMAND; MAN'S BUT TO OBEY'

SUE CAROL, who is Miss Honey Sweet herself. Stars in "Girls Gone Wild" (Scollay).

BACLANOVA, great Russian actress of the films, who will be seen in person at the new B. F. Keith's. News, of course, that will gladden the hearts of a host of admirers of this screen vamp.

CRIME TALE IN SOUND FILM

Not only does "The Studio Murder Mystery" reveal who did the killing, but it gives a close-up of life in a motion picture studio when a talkie is being made. This angle of the photoplay, now being screened at the Metropolitan, will be interesting to all the vast army in terested in sound pictures and wanting to get the inside on how they are made. The offering marks the opening of the Metropolitan's June Banner month. Lovers of mystery stories, who were fed up in olden days by Nick Carter and like operans, will probably get huge enjoyment out of trying to guess who slew Richard Hardell and left his body on a deserted stage in a movie lot.

Five characters are set forth, and an apparently clear case is worked up against each and every one of them. Then suddenly a arch is shown up as the one who did the deed. Nothing new in this method; they did it in the old silent drama. But in this new show it is carried through with speech to aid the hearer in getting his bearings on the plot development.

Persons in the drama are Neil Hamilton, Warner Oland, Fredric March, Doris Hill, Gardner James, and others.

Ted Claire and the Met Syncopators head the week's musical stage show, "Over the Top," featuring Johnny Burke. Others in the cast of "Over the Top" are the three Bernie brothers, acrobats; the Don Rowan, tap dancer; and the Tiffany singers. The unit is an atmospheric production dealing with the funny side of the war.

Delivery Boy Wins His Big Movie Chance

Nick Stuart, one of the latest raised to stardom, has the big role in "Girls Gone Wild," which is now playing at the first Boston showing at the "refrigerated" Scollay Square. During his first performance for the screen as an extra, Shirley Mason blacked his eye and knocked all idea of a business career out of his head when the two waged a fistic encounter.

Stuart's father insisted that his son become a business man. So Stuart went to work for a sporting goods store as delivery boy. Much to his delight, it fell his lot to repair one of Tom Mix's guns. He thus got his chance to go into the movies.

After telling the proprietors of the store that he was resigning in favor of the films, he began six days of work as an extra until he found himself as office boy to Lewis Seiler. Later he played many minor roles as messenger boy, office boy and bell boy until he landed a part in "Cradle Snatchers."

Since that time he has had many important roles in pictures. His latest appearance is with Sue Carol.

AT NORUMBEGA PARK

The Aerial Youngs will be the free outdoor attraction next week at Norumbega Park, the pleasure resort at Auburndale-on-the-Charles. This duo of trapezists perform daring feats in the natural amphitheater of the park, while swinging high above the heads of the spectators.

JULY RELEASE

July 13 has been set as the pre-release date of "On With the Show," the first 100 per cent natural color, talking, singing and dancing Vitaphone picture in Technicolor.

Aid to Stage Seen in Talkies

By Ernest Glendinning

THE legitimate theater is too strongly entrenched to be driven out.

Many persons have asked me what effect the talkies would have upon the stage. My engagement at the Copley as guest star in "The Man Who Changed His Name" has strengthened me in my conviction that nothing can ever put the legitimate theater out of existence.

There is no denying that the talkies have had their effect upon the theater. They have drawn to their folds many of our players.

They are at present enjoying the "spotlight," so to speak. But matters will soon readjust themselves. And when they do we will have a smaller and better theater; a theater for greater opportunity for individual creation. And the most potent medium for this individuality will be the resident organization, repertory and stock companies. In time the talkies will help the theater. It will create many converts.

Ernest Glendinning

It will awaken in a new generation, unfamiliar with the stage, the desire to hear the beauty of the theater; to enjoy its magic spell and soothing influence, something we can never expect from a mechanical reproduction.

It's like Old Home Week playing in Boston, and especially at the Copley, where audiences are so warm and responsive.

My engagement has brought me much joy and pride. In the first place, it has made it possible for me to say I have appeared on the stage of almost every legitimate theater in Boston. I am very proud of this fact, for I have always enjoyed my work in this city. Then again I have many friends in Boston. You see, I was married and spent my honeymoon in this city, shortly after the Armistice.

He Might Play Beetle Role Some Time

It is not every actor who can boast of being a landmark. But Lon Chaney has that distinction. It happened in Hollywood when a wise-cracker pointed to a beetle and remarked: "Don't step on it—it may be Lon Chaney!"

Chaney, who appears in "Where East Is East," his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, on the screen at Loew's Orpheum the coming week, is one of the most interesting figures on the screen.

Knows His Geometry, Villain Roles, Too

From a professor of mathematics at Cornell to the position of Hollywood's ugliest actor may seem like a long jump, but it has been negotiated by Louis Wolheim, who plays the role of a gun-running racketeer in Cuba in "The Shady Lady," Phyllis Haver's new picture, which will be on view at the Keith-Albee, Monday.

LARBOARD WATCH, AHOY!

EVERY INCH a skipper is Charles Winninger as he handles that gorgeous craft "Show Boat" (Colonial), hailing from the port of Ziegfeldian Success. And what a golden cargo she carries!

WILL DIRECT OWN WORK

Tomorrow night in Symphony Hall the Pop concerts will enter upon the seventh week of their 44th season with the Boston performance of Alfredo Casella's violin concerto, in which Louis W. Krasner will be the soloist. The composer will then conduct his recent score for the first time, although it was heard in many cities of Europe and America last season when performed by Joseph Szigetti, to whom it is dedicated. Louis Krasner, since graduating from the New England Conservatory, has had a remarkable season in Europe, giving recitals and appearing with orchestras in France, England, Germany, Austria and other countries. He has recently returned from Europe, and tomorrow night at the Pops will indeed be his first in this country since his European successes.

The program for tonight follows:

Overture in "Russian and Ludmilla" ..... Glinka

(Prelude to Khovantchina ..... Moussorgsky (Dance of the Persian Slaves ..... Rimsky-Korsakow (Prelude to Act 3 ..... Tchaikowsky (Khovantchina ..... Laddey
Ballet Music from "The Fire Bird" ..... Stravinsky
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor" ..... Borodin

They Owe Everything to Their Mother

In other days the Marx Brothers were in a musical act billed as the Six Mascots, the others of the sextet being their mother and their aunt. The Marx "Four Cocoanuts" at the Washington St. Olympia and Fenway. Their mother continued to use their boss. She went to the motion picture studio to approve or criticize her sons' work before the camera. She is the sister of Al Shean of Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean fame. She is the daughter of a German magician, and her mother was an accomplished harpist, who handed down her old instrument through the family for Harpo to practice on as a child. Mrs. Marx herself was a professional actress and producer of vaudeville acts.

STORY FOR ROGERS

"They Had to See Paris," by Homer Croy has been bought for a Will Rogers talking feature vehicle.

PREMIERE OF BIG SHOW TO BE IN HUB

Florenz Ziegfeld has decided to have the world premiere of his new musical production, "Show Girl," at the Colonial, Monday night, June 24. The engagement will be for only a single week before its New York opening at the Ziegfeld Theater, on July 3.

The Colonial will close next Saturday night, at the termination of the "Show Boat" engagement for a week in order that the new production may have the theater for rehearsals.

Stock Now Gives Way to Talking Pictures

Manager Stanley James of the Auditorium in Malden announces a season of talking pictures, starting today. The first is the Fox Movietone play, "Speakeasy," with Lola Lane, Paul Page and Henry B. Walthall. The Auditorium has for a number of years been the only stock-playing house in Malden. It has been thoroughly renovated, and new electrical equipment of the very latest type has been installed, enabling it to give talking pictures in first-class manner. Manager James will present "In Old Arizona," "Thru Different Eyes," and the very latest productions. An extra added feature program will complete the bill at each presentation.

SEE AND HEAR MOVIE STAR IN PERSON

Despite the fact that the United States does not recognize the Russian government, the talents of actors and actresses of that country have long been realized by motion picture and stage producers, in at least two or three cases, Russians have become stars almost overnight. One who is looming as the greatest in Baclanova, the noted actress of the Moscow Art Theater, and a celebrated film star, who is making her debut in vaudeville at the new B. F. Keith's tomorrow in a playlet, "The Farewell Supper."

Educated in the best private schools of Russia, Baclanova won a contest in which 403 participated. Eventually, the Moscow Theater of Combined Arts was founded about her.

She came to this country at the behest of Morris Gest to play "Carmenetta" and subsequently joined "The Miracle" cast, alternating in the role of the nun with Lady Diana Manners.

In the supporting cast in her playlet is Baclanova's husband, Nicholas Soussanin, a Russian actor and director of the stage, who has been tremendously successful in motion pictures by his excellence of his character portrayals. "The Farewell Supper" was written by Arthur Schnitzler.

Another headline act on the same program will present Bill Robinson, "The Dark Cloud of Joy," who is hailed as the greatest clown dancer on the stage. He recently waived an invitation to star in the "Black Birds" company that went to London preferring to remain here and appear before his Boston audiences.

John T. Murray and Vivian Oakland make the third headline attraction on the coming big bill, and they return to offer something entirely new in their inimitable manner of delivery. The Hickey Brothers with their comedy antics, are yet another feature of the bill, which marks the fourth of the new season of programs offered the Palace Theater in New York. Other big acts also appear on the bill.

STAGE AND SCREEN

MIRACLES GROW UP LIKE MUSHROOMS

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

WE had walked, like a crab, backwards. Out of the auditorium, into the lobby. Eyes screenward. Ears pricked. It was after hours; the theater was empty. So we could see straight through to the stage. The wizard executive at our side clapped his hands. Once. Like a flash came the amazing thing. The throated screen moved and spoke—for the first time we beheld the marvel of the large silver sheet combined with apparently flawless voice reproduction. The figures seemed alive; it was an almost perfect illusion of the legitimate stage. It was all in color, so like the real thing in gorgeous musical comedy that it brought an involuntary gasp of astonishment.

• • •

MIRACLES are become matter-of-fact things. To the modest executive at our side, they are the routine of his daily effort. He was Myron C. Sheilman, of the Publix staff, young in years but old in motion picture wisdom. Knowing him, you cease to wonder that a national organization has given into his hands a theater made ultra-modern at vast expense, wherein are to be tried out for the first time the latest achievements of inventive genius in the film field. This playhouse was formerly the Community, at Newton, now completely done over and renamed the Paramount. In a very important way it is a workshop whence will come the tested equipment that will speed the day of perfect talkies.

Myron C. Sheilman

WHEN Mr. Sheilman invited us out, we had expected to spend a pleasant hour. Actually, we stayed six hours or more, and more pleasure took on a thrill quality with a kink to it. And really, we did feel a bit of envy of those Newton audiences which are getting the results of these experiments 'way ahead of folks elsewhere. The large screen was of special conservation, to get size, definition, and clarity, as Mr. Sheilman explained. It measured three times as large as the ordinary screen. That the screen is a success was easy to be read out of the results obtained.

• • •

"ONE might say that the world had been showing pictures for 20 years on sheets and cloths," said Mr. Sheilman, "and that only within recent months have the brains of the business been turned to development of the screen. And now rapid progress is being made. This big screen shows what can be done for certain scenes, as of courtrooms, or spectacles. Just now we are using two projection machines, one with the ordinary lens for the small screen, and the other with the Rosen lens for the large screen. But we shall soon undoubtedly have a single machine equipment whereby the operator at the proper moment may swing from one lens to the other with no more than the movement of a finger.

• • •

"IT will interest Bostonians to know that the inventor of the new lens is Joseph Rosen, chief projectionist for Publix. It is a matter of local pride also that this first frame for the new cinemascope screen is the work of John Bennett, stage manager at the Scollay.

• • •

"THIS workshop idea is just one evidence of Publix Theaters Corporation enterprise. It cost $500,000 to make this plant possible; but the improvements already here and to come prove the wisdom of this step forward. From Publix will introduce the newest accomplishments in sound-film presentation. In addition to our big screen, to be used for color and group scenes, we have other equipment to which we shall add as fast as the inventive mind turns out its work. We have an effect machine, something new and quite expensive, which opens a wide range of effects in ordinary pictures, such as color scenes, storm atmosphere, and so on. By thus trying out these things we hope we shall be hastening the day of faster lenses and films, of the third dimensional effect, the larger screen, color, and still other features that are yet even unimagined."

• • •

MR SHELLMAN ought to have been widely known to Bostonians long ago. It was he that as loaned by Publix to work with the Navy Department, and Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, at the Charlestown Navy Yard, in the campaign to secure funds for rebuilding the "Old Ironsides." As a result of his work, Admiral Andrews later commissioned him a senior grade lieutenant in the Naval Reserve. Mr. Sheilman, at the age of 30, looks back at a rapid rise through 12 years in the motion picture business, from a job scraping film cans as a boy, to the important post he holds today. One is forced to think that early in his life he heard adventure was around the corner, and giving it a chase, found out it was also opportunity.

• • •

WE have long held a deep respect for Publix, its spirit, its outlook upon public and its employes, its progressiveness. That respect is now enhanced. Myron Sheilman is typical of Publix large-mindedness, pep for progress, desire to do big things in a big way. Such factors always spell s-u-c-c-e-s-s!

'DOLLAR DAY' AT REVERE

Today is bargain day at Revere Beach. That means that another "Dollar Day" is being held at this popular seashore resort and tickets are being sold for one dollar calling for admission to more than a score of shows, rides and other attractions.

In conjunction with the "Dollar Day," a monster display of fireworks will be shown through the courtesy of the amusement division of the Revere Chamber of Commerce.

There will be other features to mark the day, including comedy exhibitions of diving and swimming at the Nautical swimming pool by a troupe of aquatic comedians.

As the supply of dollar day tickets is limited, Colin F. Chisholm, secretary of the amusement division of the Revere Chamber of Commerce, has issued a warning to obtain tickets as early as possible.

Tickets are on sale at Filene's, Jordan's, Gilchrist's, Shepard's, Houghton's and Burke's ticket agency.

Special Music to Honor Great Convention

A very interesting overture has been arranged for the week at the Metropolitan by Guy Harrison, musical director of the Grand Orchestra, in honor of the biennial convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs, to be held in Boston. A special orchestral [illegible] has been made of the outstanding melodies of the great Russian composer, Anton Rubinstein, including such favorites as the Kamenoi-Ostrow, melody in F, etc., culminating with the first movement of the great D minor concerto. The piano part is to be played by the world-famous pianist, Leo Ornstein.

2 GIRLS HURT IN CRASH OF 3 AUTOS

Two women were severely shaken, three automobiles were damaged and circus posters and paste were scattered all over a street in a triple collision at Broadway and Alewife Brook parkway, Somerville.

Raymond C. Hemmingway of Bennington st., East Boston, driver of a truck, was arrested for operating without a license. George L. Fritz, in charge of the truck, was charged with drunkenness.

According to the police, the truck crashed into an automobile operated by Harold A. Winn, Larch rd., Cochituate, throwing it directly into the path of another car, driven by John F. Bacon of 1446 Mystic Valley parkway, Medford.

Margaret Bradish and Mrs. Mary Swanson of 14 and 18 Pitcher ave., Medford, respectively, passengers in Bacon's machine, were shaken. Bacon received a slight cut on his right hand. All three machines had to be towed away.

Patrolmen McNamara and Small arrested the two men.

Woman "L" Rider Hurt When Truck Hits Car

Mrs. Mary Spangle, 38, of East 9th st., South Boston, was severely injured today when an oil truck collided with the street car on which she was a passenger on Southampton st., South End. The truck was driven by Joseph P. Collins, 117 L st., South Boston.

3 CIRCUS MEN HURT, 1 DYING

Attleboro, June 8 (AP)—Three circus employes were injured, one perhaps fatally, in accidents which marred the arrival of the show here today.

Robert Dickson, 56, of Penn, Ind., suffered a crushed chest, compound fracture of the arm and internal injuries when he was caught between the top of a circus wagon and the edge of a railway underpass. He is in a precarious condition at a local hospital. Joseph King, of Boston, in the same accident, escaped with cuts and bruises.

BOSTON BANKERS IN $350,000 SUIT

R. J. Reker & Co., Boston investment bankers, are joint complainants with International Proprietaries, Inc., in a $350,000 suit filed in Suffolk superior court against Stephen A. Lynch of Atlanta, Ga., for his alleged misrepresentation in a stock sale.

Both plaintiffs allege Lynch, now in France, violated agreements of guaranty and indemnity in the sale to the Boston firm of common stock in International Proprietaries, Inc., by failing to disclose liabilities of $118,000 and a federal tax assessment of $39,901.

Van Sweringen Wins $90,000,000 Fight

Cincinnati, June 8 (AP)—The way for the completion of the Van Sweringen $90,000,000 Union Terminal Depot project at Cleveland was cleared today when the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here handed down a decision immediately vacating a preliminary injunction granted the Pittsburgh & West Virginia Railroad by Federal Judge Jones, Cleveland.

2 Cabinet Members Given Nicknames

Washington, June 8 (INS)—At least two members of President Hoover's Cabinet have achieved nicknames, although they may not know it yet. Secretary of State Stimson with whom no one would dare take liberties, is referred to behind his back as "Stimmie."

Charles Francis Adams, scion of former Presidents, is "Poker Face Charlie," because of his inscrutable mien.

Hope to Smother Gas Well Fire by Steam

Buffalo, June 8 (AP)—Within a short time workmen are ready tomorrow, the gas well fire blazing on a farm near East Aurora since Wednesday night, should be smothered by steam, officials of the Iroquois Gas Co., owners of the well, announced today. The natural gas was ignited by a blast of mysterious origin that killed two workmen and injured several others.

LINDY DAY AT REVERE

BOSTON AMERICAN LINDBERGH CLUB
P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass.

I am enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope. Please send me a strip of free tickets to Revere Beach Amusements for June 15.

STREET .....
CITY ..... STATE .....

Soft Sea Waves Call — Lindy Club to Revere

Here is where the boys and girls of the Boston American Lindbergh Club will spend June 15 as the guests of city officials of Revere, the Revere Chamber of Commerce and the amusement places along the midway on Revere Beach.

ROUND OF FUN AWAITS CLUB MEMBERS

Elsewhere on this page today will be found a blank for boys and girls of the Lindbergh Club to fill out and send with an addressed and stamped envelope to the Boston American Lindbergh Club, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, to obtain free tickets to various amusement places at Revere Beach on June 15.

These free tickets—30,000 of them—have been provided for the boys and girls of the Lindbergh Club through the Revere Chamber of Commerce and the owners of various concessions and amusement places at the beach.

Boys and girls who are able to call at the Boston American Lindbergh Club office personally may obtain their tickets upon presentation of the blank appearing in the Boston Evening American. They must have their membership card and pins when they call for their tickets.

MUST HAVE PINS

The membership pin and button also must be worn at all times when you go to Revere Beach next Saturday as your tickets to the various amusement places will not be accepted unless you have both to show to the doormen.

June 15, which is to be known as Lindy Day at Revere, is just another treat provided for boys and girls of the Boston American Lindbergh Club. Many surprises are coming and the boys and girls of the club must read the Boston Evening American every day to learn about them.

In planning Lindy Day at Revere Beach, Mayor Andrew A. Casassa, C. F. Chisholm, secretary of the Revere Chamber of Commerce; and Sidney Curtis, publicity director of the Revere Chamber of Commerce, decided to spare no expense in providing a day of recreation for the children. When they presented their plan to the owners of concessions and amusement places along the beach they at once met with an unanimous approval of providing the boys and girls with free tickets to the various amusement places.

CIVIC CO-OPERATION

The following amusement places will cooperate with the Boston American Lindbergh Club in giving members free tickets on June 15: Whip and Merry-go-round, operated by John J. Hurley; Hey Dey, operated by Jack McNally; Darkness and Dawn, operated by A. W. Nichols; The Bug, operated by Jack Shay; The Hippodrome, The Caterpillar and Derby Racer, operated by T. L. Gill; The Fun House, operated by J. Eugene Pearce; The Airplane Swing and Dodgem, operated by James A. Rotherham, the man who is manager of Rotherham popcorn; The Dragon's Pit, operated by John McGinnis; The Palace of Wonders, operated by Billy McGinnis; The Virginia Reel and The Scooter, operated by Tom Hazeling; Fun-On-The-Farm, The Glass House and Lindy's Hop, operated by G. Seaman Shields; The Cyclone Coaster, Noah's Ark, The Coal Mine and The Pretzel, operated by John Shayeb; The Airplane Swing, Chute-the-Chutes and Indian Village, operated by Herbert N. Ridgway, and Dodgem, operated by Fred Hurley.

The tickets mailed to boys and girls of the Boston Evening American Lindbergh Club will be good at the above places of amusement between 12 noon and 7 p. m. on June 15 only. So boys and girls don't forget the date. Send in your tickets today and don't forget the stamped envelope at once to Boston Evening American Lindbergh Club, P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass. We cannot promise to send out more than the allotted 30,000 tickets. So a boy and girl not getting in or bringing in a coupon will receive several tickets to one or more of the amusement places at Revere Beach.

FIREMEN HONOR DEAD COMRADES TOMORROW

The programs of the parade and memorial services by the Veteran Firemen's Association of Boston Fire and Protective Department, to be held tomorrow, was announced by George H. Johnson, director of public celebrations for the city of Boston.

The services will be held at the firemen's lot at Forest Hills Cemetery.

The participating organizations will assemble at Parkman Bandstand on Boston Common at 9:30 a. m., where a line of march will be formed.

The route of the parade is: Boston Common, Charles st. to Beacon st., to Arlington st., to Commonwealth ave., to Berkeley st., to Tremont st., to electric cars. The parade will reform at Washington st. car barns and march along Washington st. to Morton st. to the cemetery.

The services at the lot will begin with a selection by the Angel Guardian Band, followed by a prayer by Rev. Charles L. Page, formerly of Dudley Street Baptist Church, and an oration by Timothy F. Donovan, president of the Boston City Council. The graves will then be decorated by details and a wreath will be placed on the monument by Mrs. A. G. Sheehan, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary to B. F. D.

Taps will be sounded by Army buglers. Then the line will reform and march back to the trolley cars.

Among the invited guests are Gov. Alvan Macon Nichols, Fire Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, Thomas J. McGarrey, vice president of the New England States Veteran Firemen's Association; Gaspar E. Bacon, president of Massachusetts Senate; Thomas H. Carrigan, president, Boston Protective Department; Chief D. F. Sennott, Supt. Henry E. Thompson, Boston Protective Department; L. P. Saltonstall, Speaker of House; ex-Mayor James M. Curley, Maj. Gen. Preston Brown.

Col. Hughes, chief of staff, Army Base; Supt. Michael H. Crowley of Boston police, Supt. Edward William, Boston Fire Department; ex-Fire Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn and Dist. Atty. William J. Foley.

The chief marshal will be Henry J. McNealy of Russell Club, with Edward J. Conroy of the Charitable Association as his adjutant, and Lieut. F. J. Dobbratz of Boston fire department as chief of aids. The memorial day committee is headed by Edward J. C. Powers of Russell Fire Club as chairman and by Martin F. Cavanaugh of Roxbury Veteran Firemen's Association as secretary.

HONORS PARENTS OF BLOODSWORTH

Governor Allen today presented to the parents of John N. Bloodsworth, who before his death successfully passed the National Guard test for an officer's commission, his diploma.

Mr. and Mrs. Bloodsworth, who live in West Medford, accepted the diploma. Mrs Bloodsworth saying "it is indeed an honor for us."

The Governor expressed his regret at the death of young Bloodsworth, said the State had lost a good officer and presented Mrs. Bloodsworth with a gold State seal.

Five Missionaries Captured by Bandits

Hankow, China, June 8 (AP)—The China Inland Mission here has received word from Shekichen in Southeast Honan that five of its missionaries have been captured by bandits.

Those captured were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Weller and Mr. and Mrs. John Walker and child, members of the Shekichen station, and Miss J. P. Brook of the Kaifeng Mission station.

Poker Hounds and Bridge Fans Chip In for Uncle Sam

Washington, June 8—Poker hounds and bridge fans are contributing more than $5,000,000 a year to Uncle Sam's Treasury, the Internal Revenue Bureau announced today.

Playing cards, taxed 10 cents per pack, are yielding that revenue. Last year 56,271,459 packs were manufactured. The manufacture and sale have "increased tremendously," a study showed.

American playing cards, like American automobiles, cigarettes and movies, also are winning converts abroad. Nearly 6,500,000 packs were exported.

CONFESSOR OF DUCE IN HUB

Boston is entertaining this week a humble Milanese before whom Mussolini, the Iron Man of Italy, does not hesitate to bow his knee and to bare his soul.

The visitor is Rev. Vittorino Facchinetti, D.D., of St. Anthony's Convent, Milan, a Franciscan monk and confessor to the Duce.

Dr. Facchinetti has been traveling in the United States since April and is conducting a retreat at St. Leonard's church, North End.

"I love Mussolini because essentially he is one of us, a Franciscan," Dr. Facchinetti declared in describing his impressions of the Duce.

"The Duce's life is almost as simple as that of the great patron saint who inspired the order. The same sincerity, the same devotion, the same profound belief in God."

Dr. Facchinetti denied the rumor that Mussolini was not at heart a practical Christian and only professed piety to strengthen his political position.

"You must not listen to such heresies," he admonished. "I have had the privilege of being an intimate friend of the Duce and his family for years, entering his house as I pleased, and I know otherwise.

"He believes in God. He is a good Catholic, a practical Catholic. He is not a dictator really, because he is too much of a Christian and loves humanity. He loves the Italians, his people."

Dr. Facchinetti has written a score of historical and religious works, including a 10-volume biography of St. Francis d'Assisi.

MAN REPORTS BAD BEATING

Charging he was beaten and robbed by three men at Main and Windsor sts., John Keohane, 31, of Coolidge place, Cambridge, was taken to the Cambridge City Hospital for treatment for a possible fracture of the skull.

An official of the hospital today said an X-ray was taken of Keohane's head today, but the report of the findings will not be made public until later.

Before lapsing into unconsciousness, Keohane told the police he was returning from a hotel in Boston and had reached Main and Windsor sts., Cambridge, when the men intercepted him.

One man opened a conversation with him, another elbowed him against the wall and the third felled him with a blow over the right eye. He declared the blow stunned him so much he was unable to make an outcry or defend himself.

Gen. Rivera to Retire as Spain's Premier

London, June 8 (INS)—General Primo de Rivera, dictator in Spain, is shortly resigning as premier and will become Spanish Ambassador to Paris, it is said in a dispatch to the Daily Telegraph. Senor Quinones de Leon, present minister to Paris, will replace Primo as Premier, the dispatch states.

Chicago Evangelist to Speak in Waltham

Frank Ericson of Chicago and Andover, Ill., widely known evangelist, will speak at the evening service at the First Lutheran Church, Waltham, tomorrow. His subject will be "The Christian and his Amusements."

GIRL'S BODY IS SENT BACK TO MAINE HOME

Lawrence, June 8—The final chapter in the tragic love drama of Miss Louise J. Douglass, 22-year-old school teacher whose body was taken from the South canal yesterday, was written here last evening when the body of the young woman was placed aboard a train for transportation to her home town in Gray, Me.

There in the sheltered little country town where the love entered her life which is believed directly responsible for her tragic death, the school teacher will be laid at rest in the family lot.

Frank N. Douglass, father of the girl and former selectman of Gray, and her brother, William Douglass, who remained here during the three days of search for the missing girl, returned to Gray escorting the body.

Before Mr. Douglass left the city he visited police headquarters and expressed his appreciation for the assistance in the case of police officials.

DON JUAN SLAIN FOR HIS LOVE

New York, June 8 (INS)—The gay life of a modern Don Juan was ended today by a love rival who shot him down in the doorway of his own home, scene of a tryst only a short time before.

"Stick 'em up and don't yell," was the only warning Jacob Furman, 25, a merchant, had before his slayer, posing as a detective, fired the fatal shot in Furman's apartment at No. 1304 Stebbins ave., the Bronx.

Stories of love affairs, told by his roommate and the finding of photographs of a beautiful brunette in Furman's room, led police to believe jealousy was back of the murder, and detectives were to question the brunette.

Nearly Has Upset at New Airport

The honor of making the first commercial plane landing at the new Gould Airport in Framingham fell to Joseph R. Roberts, student pilot, of Needham. The new airport will be operated by the Way State Flying Service and most of the company's equipment will be moved from Boston Airport to the new field within 10 days. Roberts who learned to fly in the Bay State school, with Kenneth Hurley in the front cockpit, made a spectacular landing in the soft ground of the new airport. Witnesses said they couldn't see how Roberts managed to land the plane without turning over.

Notre Dame Academy Celebrates Tonight

A joint celebration will be held tonight at the Roxbury Academy of Notre Dame celebrating the 75th anniversary of its founding and the 25th anniversary of the Alumnae Association.

A large attendance of the Alumnae is expected. The plans have been formulated by the officers: Miss Jane Maynes, Dorchester, president; Miss Helen L. Watson Roxbury, vice-president; Miss Marie Daly, Roxbury, treasurer; Miss Mary Sheahan, Woburn, corresponding secretary; Miss Ruth M. McMahon, West Roxbury, recording secretary.

Dr. Mackey to Visit European Hospitals

Dr. Charles E. Mackey, South Boston physician is sailing for Europe on the SS. Republic from New York tomorrow.

Dr. Mackey will be abroad six weeks, studying at various hospitals and clinics in Berlin, Germany; Vienna, Austria and Oslo, Norway.

Ex-Mayor Dies in Bed

Putnam, Ct., June 8 (AP)—Victor Chapdelaine, 73, former mayor of Putnam, who retired two years ago, was found dead in bed today. Heart trouble is given as the cause.

PARAMOUNT TO EXPLOIT OWN FAVORITES

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, June 8—One of the surprises of this uncertain film business of ours comes from the meagre box office returns of "The Letter," starring Jeanne Eagels. Miss Eagels is not causing any sensation at the film theaters throughout the country and a Paramount official frankly says "The Letter" would have gone over much better if one of the Paramount movie favorites had played the pleading role.

That is rather a hard thing to say in view of Miss Eagel's superb performance and particularly when "The Letter" is ultra-sophisticated and not the usual patter that the public has become more or less accustomed to the last few years.

Miss Eagel's failure to turn in the shekels has caused Paramount to exploit its own favorites more strongly. Evelyn Brent, for instance, is being starred. Stardom was withheld from her for well over a year although in the opinion of most people, she was well entitled to it.

Clara Bow is being groomed for bigger and better talkies. Clara's voice while perhaps not that of a Bernhardt or a Duse in quality, is still effective enough to help her keep her place as the college boys' favorite. "Love 'em And Leave 'em" will be remade by Paramount with all its dialogue and best lines kept intact.

* * *

I KNEW it wouldn't be long before the artistry of "Journey's End" would penetrate Hollywood. This play, with its intense realism, could not fail to interest the film producers who are now trying to give the talkies everything the stage possesses.

James Whale, who directed "Journey's End," has been brought here by Paramount to direct "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals." This is to be one of Paramount's prize productions, and for that reason Gary Cooper has been elected to play the lead.

Paramount is very careful of young Cooper's roles. In spite of his expressed preference for Lupe Velez she continues to be the idol of thousands of flappers throughout the country.

* * *

WE haven't any more expressions of wonderment over the arrivals in Hollywood these days, but if we had just one little expression left we'd exclaim over the engagement of Dudley Digges, actor and director of the New York Theater Guild. There is so many of the most succesful theater guild plays.

We had thought he was a fixture on Broadway, but Sam Goldwyn was able to convince him that the movies are an excellent field for his talents, with the result that Digges will arrive here next week to play the role of Vidal in "Condemned." Ronald Colman's next picture. He will also direct the dialogue for Goldwyn.

* * *

ROMANCE comes into the life of "petite" Betty Grayson. Betty is sailing on the Homeric, June 15 with her brother, ostensibly for a tour of Europe. The real reason that Betty is going abroad is to be present at the graduation of John Prendergast, her heavy suitor, who completes his course at Oxford this summer.

Betty, her brother and young Prendergast will spend three weeks on the Lido, basking in the sunshine and enjoying Italy's famous beaches. In answer to the direct question of whether or not Betty will marry young Prendergast while on the other side, she only looks serious and says something about loving her own country. Anyway, it's a nice romance and young Prendergast is a mighty lucky chap.

* * *

CLARK and McCullough are leaving the talkies to return to vaudeville. I have an idea that this means that Fox and the other film companies will continue making expensive shorts. Paying exorbitant salaries to Broadway headliners ruin the short subjects into real money. In fact, some of these shorts cost almost as much as the features. It is only logical after the talkies are readjusted that many changes will be made. You will find that many stage people will be returning East. Wait and see if I am not right.

* * *

RUTH TAYLOR is one of the home girls who put over her score and had everyone in Hollywood commenting on her success. Miss Ruth, you will remember, is the little girl who was selected to play the lead in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Later she very wisely accepted a stage engagement and proved to the waiting world that she could speak her lines with the best of 'em. Now she has been signed for the lead in "College Coquette," a Columbia special, with George Archainbaud, directing.

* * *

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Some of Hollywood's notables giving the crowd at the fights a thrill. Buster Keaton winning the biggest ham in the place. Constance Talmadge bringing home the bacon. Bebe Daniels clutching a paper machiere statue. Ben Lyon with an armful of canned goods. Betty Bronson making arrangements to leave next week for Europe. Harry Crocker and Harry D'Arcast, Diane Ellis and Charles Lederer at "Alibi."

Tom Geraghty with bag and portable typewriter, driving into Pickfair to spend the weekend. Several determined Shriners following some of the movie folk to the Santa Monica Swimming Club. Mrs. John Robertson in new summer sport clothes at the Montmartre. Marilyn Miller getting her first glimpse of the First National studois. That's all today. See you Monday.

DANCE HOSTESS IS HUB POWER MAN'S BRIDE

Mayor of Revere Arrests a Bootleg Suspect

Thrilling Six-Day Novel by a Noted Author

CHAPTER 6

NEWPORT was very gay. Everyone said so. There was an unceasing round of dancers, dinners, engagements.

Automatically Felicity went through her appointed routine, and even her friends scarcely noticed the change in her.

Now, that she had the chance to review what had happened, she remembered that unforgettable hour in Nick's apartment with Zoe Gale, Felicity was clearer in her mind.

She did not believe the things she had said. Shrewdly she guessed at the other girl's desire to hurt her by any means. But the pain its could not be denied. If only he would write! He must write. Back of everything lay that one word from him, one word that asked forgiveness. She could forgive him anything.

Her mother, whose contemptuous tongue lashed everyone, was careful to spare him, Felicity noticed. And Gram was taken everywhere, introduced everywhere. Mrs. Drake sang his praises to anyone who would listen.

Felicity drove with Gram. She drove with him a good deal, painfully tried to improve his golf, and laughed at the patience and dogged endeavor in his mild eyes.

He liked her, she knew, and at this time she needed some one to like her very much indeed. Her pride had been struck down and she was grateful that Gram was so deeply interested.

But each day her heart sank when she received no word from Nick.

Graves was seeing that every letter from the despairing young husband was returned unopened and Mrs. Drake was exulting at her strategy.

She might not be earning all her money, but she was earning a good part of it. The boy was almost out of his head.

There were times when he pra-

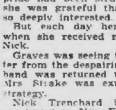
The Curious Quizzer

South Boston Folk Answer His Daily Question and Pose for Pictures

THE QUESTION

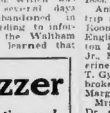
Do you think practical courses in aviation should be provided in this city's higher grade schools?

MISS VONNIE MORAN, K st.—I should be a fine thing for the girls to know how to fly, I think. So, too, should we the same as I only wish I was a flying master on the subject when I went to high school. I would have been one of the first girls to take up the course. To know all about the workings of flying machines would be a great advantage. Of course there are plenty of girls and boys in school who would not consider themselves safe in the ground, but I think for those who had the desire to learn, the opportunity to take such a course should not be denied them.



PATRICK J. KEELEY, Eighth st.—As for myself, I do not believe in flying. I do not approve of teaching boys to fly in machines which endanger their lives, with the small chance one has nowadays against being killed or injured by automobiles, there is less hope for a person in an airship of any kind when it fails with him from great heights. Everybody knows that deaths from flying are daily occurrences in every part of the country. Too many things are now taught in our schools which can never be of any earthly good after the boys and girls get through school. Teaching the children how to fly an airplane would be another foolish thing.

MISS MARGARET EDWARDS, M st.—Planes are now almost as safe as automobiles to ride in. If boys in the high schools were taught by an efficient instructor I think some of them would be so deeply interested in air navigation that new appliances for safety would originate through the training. I feel confident that perfect safety in air travel would come much quicker through boys who made an intensive study of flying heavier than air machines under the guidance of capable instructors. I would make it optional in schools as to who should take a course in aviation.



LEO V. CONLEY, Leeds st.—As aviation is the coming method used in travel, I am in favor of boys of high school age taking up the study in school. In a few years airplanes will be so common that they will attract no more attention than an automobile does when parked at the curb. Thousands of young fellows learned how to run an automobile by just sitting on the seat behind the wheel and "tinkering" with the parts within reach of their hands and feet. In a short time these very boys had learned how to operate the machine as well as an expert could. Take the same kind of boys who are interested in flying and under proper teaching I think they would soon evolve methods for safer travel by air than we now have.

PUTS BEER CARRIER IN CELL

Mayor Andrew H. Casassa of Revere caught a bootlegger early today and put him in a cell. The man had three bottles of beer on his person.

The mayor was strolling on Ocean ave. with Patrolman Philip Gallo when they saw a man about to enter a house. He had suspicious bulges, so Mayor Casassa gave the order to arrest him. A search revealed the beer and the man who gave his name as Andrew Philbin of Chestnut st., Chelsea, was locked up charged with illegal transportation.

Stolen Waltham Car Is Found in Vermont

An automobile owned by Frank Murphy of Wayland, which was stolen in Waltham several days ago, was found abandoned in Readsboro, Vt., according to information received by the Waltham police. The police learned that seven hills upon which Providence is built, a friendly police officer undertook to point out the buildings that flanked the Capitol.

"That building on the right of the Capitol is St. Patrick's Catholic Church. And that one on the left is the new Masonic building. And next to that is a Swedish Lutheran Church."

On hearing this, we recalled the words of the Mayor of Providence, James C. Dunne, who told us that Providence is a city where "tolerance" is a real tolerance." Here was a symbol of it in stone on Capitol hill.

MAYOR DUNNE, by the way, was interrupted just as he was about to go to his luncheon of crackers and milk. He postponed his meal to talk.

"I came from Ward 3, where we are politicians from the day we get out of rompers," he remarked, explaining his entry into politics. "But we have no serious political battles here. We are fortunate in having men in the city government who think more of the city's welfare than of their own advancement.

"Aviation was my hobby until my wife forced me to quit flying. I'm a place for a father of four children, she insists, is on the ground. But I am chairman of the aviation committee, and am anxious to see Providence one of the leading airports of the East.

"I am a keen wrestling fan and a great admirer of Gus Sonnenberg, who makes Providence his home. I like baseball, too, having played for Tim O'Neill 'the father of amateur baseball here.'

Noticing that we were gazing at a picture on the desk in front of him, Mayor Dunne said: "I suppose you know George Cohan was born in Providence. That's one of his pictures that he gave me." And so we remembered that George, of musical comedy fame, is a Providence boy.

ONE of the best known members of the city government is Charles V. Chapin, M. D. 73 year old director of the health department. Since 1876 there are only two heads of this department Dr. Chapin has held the position since 1884.

"I have been honored by the League of Nations by the publication of a work by Nelson Chagas of Brazil, who took my paper on the subject of fumigation of rooms after a contagious disease and enlarged upon it, giving credit, of course, to me.

"I first delivered this paper before the American Medical Association. I showed that fumigation did absolutely no good. The Medical Association would have unanimous ly condemned me for my dangerous statements, but of course, I did not vote to condemn myself. Four years ago, I was completely vindicated in my position."

THERE is no need to try to make Providence "air minded." It is already. A. E. Casgrain of the Chamber of Commerce, secretary to the committee on aviation, was enthusiastic in telling of Providence's plans for an airport. Gaspee Point will most likely be the site chosen by the committee, composed entirely of practical fliers.

Providence is growing. The Chamber of Commerce has added to the State seal, which is surmounted by the word "Hope," the word "Do." And the 421-foot industrial buildings building, the highest building in New England next to the Custom House tower, is the concrete evidence that Providence is growing more progressive every day.

ROGER WILLIAMS' EYES WOULD POP IF HE COULD SEE PROVIDENCE TODAY

PROVIDENCE HAS CHANGED A BIT SINCE THE INDIANS WERE AROUND

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

A HEARTY handclasp spanned three centuries of American history when Alonzo R. Williams, eighth lineal descendant of Roger Williams, founder of Providence, greeted the Boston Evening American representatives on their visit to that city.

If it is true that every man bequeathes something of himself to his progeny, then we must believe, after talking an hour with Alonzo, that his illustrious forbear was a man of courage, foresight, and a rich sense of humor. We can imagine Roger, when the Puritans in 1636 persecuted him for his religious beliefs, saying to himself: "Well, you may be able to stop me from preaching my beliefs here, but I shall go and talk to the Indians. They perhaps can understand and tolerate me."

At any event, Roger Williams fled to the Providence Plantations, and on the site where Providence now stands, was greeted by the Indians, whose language he understood, and there he laid the foundation for one of New England's most charming cities.

Alonzo Williams greeted the Boston Evening American representatives in his office in the United Electric Railway, of which he is president and general manager. He is a big man physically and mentally.

"I am a lawyer," said Alonzo, "and have made an extensive study of medicine and surgery. A successful lawyer must know many things.

"I served in the Spanish-American and World wars, and have attended military schools in France, Italy and Germany. Arms was not my profession, but my hobby in my younger days. Now I derive a great deal of pleasure out of skeeting and raising flowers.

"I am naturally interested in history, and have written many articles and given speeches on historical questions, especially on matters pertaining to Rhode Island."

Alonzo, also, in order to create a better understanding between Providence and the street railway of which he is president, has written many humorous radio sketches, and, if he wished, could easily make his living "out of the air."

He discussed politics from Plato to Lenine and Trotsky, and it was only an appointment with the governor of the State that forced the American representatives to leave.

GOVERNOR NORMAN S. CASE, native of Providence, and one of the two from that city to hold the position of chief executive, is a Y. D. veteran, having captained "A" company, 103rd Machine Gun Battalion, in France. Later he served on Gen. Harbord's staff.

"My work is a hobby, and my hobby, work," said the governor. "I am married, and have three children, and my position as governor and father takes up pretty nearly all my time."

The governor's secretary, Thomas Williams, is a former Massachusetts representative and a great friend of Martin Lomasney. He is a former newspaper man, and made the stay at the capitol which, by the way, has the largest marble dome in the world, outside of St. Peter's Church in Rome, a pleasant one.

JAIL 2 CAUGHT IN STOLEN CAR AFTER CHASE

Two young men, captured with a third after a wild ride in a stolen automobile during which police fired shots, in municipal court to day were given jail sentences, while their companion was held for the Grand Jury.

Patrick Goonan, 23, of Silver st., was sentenced to two years, and Joseph Doyle, 23, of Dennis st., South Boston, to three months, after both were convicted of unlawful use of an automobile.

James Murray, 21, of Baxter st., was held in $5000 for the Grand Jury on the same charge, when Judge John Duff declined jurisdiction.

The automobile in which the trio drove away from Albany st. and Massachusetts ave., is owned by Frederick Nickerson and Truman Nickerson and Truman on Washington st., brought the machine to a stop at the points of their guns.

Westfield Veteran Dies in New York

Westfield, June 8—Raymond F. Allen, 28, corporal of G Company, 104th Infantry, 26th Division, in the World War, who saw active service with his outfit in all of its engagements died in St. Luke's Hospital, New York city, following a short illness.

He had been located in New York the past 11 years and was identified with the fruit business there.

Baby Dying After Fall on Bottles

Westfield, June 8—Veronica Kielbasa, 16-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Kielbasa of Springdale is in a dangerous condition at the Noble Hospital as the result of falling on broken glass.

The child was playing about the milk station at her father's farm when she tripped and fell against an empty milk bottle.

STATE TO WAR ON TRUCK "HOGS"

Stressing his campaign to make the roads safe for the public by checking up on oversized and overloaded trucks and on reckless drivers, George A. Parker, State Registrar of Motor Vehicles, is sending an increased force of inspectors out on the highways, where they will use the newly devised loadometers with which it is possible to weigh a truck and its load anywhere they find it.

If it is found that the truck is overloaded the driver will be ordered to take off the number of pounds in excess before he is permitted to proceed on his journey. The loadometer is placed on the ground and the truck is driven upon it and weighed, and the truck can be immediately driven away if it passes the test. There is no necessity for sending the truck out of its way to a public weighing scale, as formerly.

ASK MONUMENTS OF GRANT-LEE

Washington, June 8—Senator Overman, North Carolina, Democrat, will introduce in the Senate today a resolution providing for statues of U. S. Grant and Robert E. Lee at the two ends of the Arlington Memorial Bridge, now being constructed across the Potomac river.

It is suggested to place at the northern end of the bridge a figure of Grant, facing South, and at the southern approach one of Lee, facing North.

At the center of the bridge he would have the figures of men and women, representing the North and South clasping hands to perpetuate the memorable saying of Gen. Grant: "Let us clasp hands across the bloody chasm."

Engine Kills Brothers Who Ignored Gate

Worcester, June 8—Two brothers, Roger and James J. Donohue, were killed by a Boston & Albany engine near Market st. crossing. Railroad officials state the two men insisted on going under the crossings closed gates.

Columbia Prof. Dead After 13-Story Fall

New York, June 8—Russell Gordon Smith, a professor of sociology at Columbia University, was killed when he jumped or fell from a 13th-story window of the Park ave. apartment of Mrs. Ethel Clyde, a social registerite.

GRAUSTEIN IN DANCE ROMANCE

Following announcements that Dan Cupid's bow and arrows had brought down two fatal accidents of lower organizations, it was revealed today that the recent bride of A. R. Graustein, multi-millionaire head of the International Paper and Power Co., was for six years a dance hall hostess in New York.

Graustein, whose disclosures before the Federal Trade Commission of the activities of his company in acquiring newspapers, astounded the nation, was married March 14 to the former Claire Burton of El Paso, Texas, in that city.

It is now learned that the new Mrs. Graustein was Cordelia Patton, divorcee, who six years ago obtained a position as hostess at the Roseland Dance Hall, Fifty-first st. and Broadway, which position she held until her marriage.

Only a few days ago it was announced that Francis D. Comerford of Brookline, president of the New England Power Association, one of the largest hydro-power companies in the country, will be married June 12 in Rome, Italy, to Miss Mary McLaughlin of Worcester and Boston.

Graustein, whose office is in Broad st., this city, and his home in Framingham, said he at first had been annoyed at publicity of his romance, but did not mind any more. He is a Harvard graduate and, in addition to his power connections, is director in several banks and railroads.

His romance with the dance hall girl, pursued in the midst of swirling couples, is one of the most unusual variations of the Cinderella legend to come to hand.

Friends of Miss Graustein still employed at Roseland where for six years she was a big attraction, eagerly related the story of her good fortune today.

Big and handsome, with a sense of humor that drew a following at Roseland in a short time. In November, 1926, she won a dance heiress built on a following at Roseland in a short time. In November, 1926, she won a dance prize for exercise, dancing ability, and good looks at the Arabian Nights Ball in Roseland.

TELLS HOW THEY MET

Miss Elizabeth Cowley, head hostess, was employed at Roseland when Claire Burton took her first patron out for a dance on the gleaming floor. Miss Cowley remembered the patron to Graustein. She said yesterday:

"Of course the girls meet and dance with so many persons that it's hard to remember faces. But when a man comes back and back again, then he is a big success is proved and we become interested in her admirers.

"I remember Mr. Graustein very well. He got so he liked to sit out many dances with Claire. He became almost stupidly romantic. We didn't know he was so rich and important then."

Mabel Reminger and Isabel Cohen, two other former chums of the new Mrs. Graustein, recall that she became eager for more schooling after she met Graustein and began to study in her off hours.

"About a year ago the girls heard she was leaving her furnished room at No. 15 West 74th st and a steadily to school in preparation for "a better job." The better job proved to be her marriage to her employer, although her skill on a ballroom floor is due to her teaching. Dancing is Graustein's hobby.

Dalton Postoffice to Be Ready Oct. 1

Pittsfield, June 8—Dalton is to have a new postoffice costing $30,000. Plans have been approved by the Government. The new building will be on land owned by the Sawyer-Regan Company.

The building will be constructed by the Crane Realty Company and leased to the Government. D. Herbert Pike has been awarded the contract and work will start at once.

Completion is expected by October 1. The building will be 54 to 56 feet of brick construction. The business in the postoffice has doubled in the last eight years.

LAWRENCE GIRL IS STILL MISSING

Lawrence, June 8—With one missing girl mystery solved, police authorities today redoubled their efforts to locate Lillian Kava, 17-year-old daughter of Ignacy Kava of 194 Prospect st., who disappeared from her home nearly three weeks ago.

Efforts of the girl's relatives and friends to find some trace of her have failed thus far. Visits paid to some of her associates in Middle st. failed to shed any light on her disappearance.

Police authorities have broadcast photographs of the missing girl together with a description of her to other departments in this state and New Hampshire.

FAIL TO FIND CLUE TO FIREBUGS

Lowell, June 8—Little progress has been made in identifying the two men suspected of having started a fire on the top floor of the Flynn block at midnight Wednesday.

With no description of the men or the auto in which they raced away, the police have been up against a stone wall in their efforts to locate them.

Inspector Everett Shumway of the state fire marshal's office was here yesterday to assist in the investigation. Several persons have been questioned in connection with the blaze by Capt. David P. ...

FINED AS ROBBER OF NEWSTAND

ARLINGTON MONDAY

The theft of one newspaper and five cents cost Robert C. Whynot, Massachusetts ave., Cambridge, a fine of $5 today before Judge Arthur P. Stone in East Cambridge district court.

Whynot was arrested by Patrolman Richard Ekiley in front of a Massachusetts ave. news stand, the owner of which had asked Kelley to watch it, as money and papers were being stolen daily.

On the stand Whynot said he had left a dime in the paper box yesterday when he took his paper, ran for a car. He said that this morning he took another paper and a nickel, leaving the owner of the stand one cent to the good. Judge Stone decided he was guilty and imposed the fine.

Confessed Slayer Jailed as Burglar

Providence, June 7—Ovila Desrochers, who confessed to the murder of a girl in Newark, N. J., after an altercation over a North Providence woman, was bound over to the grand jury in $12,000 bail on three charges of breaking and entering and was sentenced to 60 days in jail on a charge of larceny when arraigned before Judge Howard B. Gorham in Sixth District Court.

Traffic Experts Visit Plymouth

Plymouth, June 8—Forty members of the National Industrial Traffic League, including President George Hannauer of the B. & M. Railroad and H. M. Rieve, vice-president of the R. & A., were guests of the Plymouth Cordage Co. here. Francis C. Holmes, treasurer of the company, welcomed them and, after a luncheon, William F. Libby, company traffic manager, showed the guests about the huge ropewalk.

Twilight Leaguers in 2 Games Today

By DICK McSWEENEY

TWO games are on the Twilight baseball card tonight, the league leading Dorchester Club facing Quincy at Faye River Field, while South Boston clashes with Salem at Donovan Field, Salem.

Frank McDonald will hurl for the Dorchester aggregation in its tussle at Quincy and there is every indication of a win for the visitors.

Bill Marshall, Dorchester High star, is playing second base for the Dorchester Team and is performing in the same manner which made him the talk of the school boy baseball world this season.

Bill's brother John, is also playing a great game at shortstop and has simply hitting has aided the Dorchester team to gain its present position in the league race.

Mahoney will hurl for Quincy with McQuinn catching his offerings.

SOUTH BOSTON is now in second place but will seek to cop down Dorchester's lead when it opposes Salem. Smith is due to box for Southie. Mahoney will do the catching.

Salem is now in fourth place, but can hop into a third place tie with Quincy if it turns back the Southie crowd. Wallace is ready to unfold a winning game against the invaders. He tossed his mates to a win over Reading recently and is about due for another good performance.

Tomorrow's Twi games are Quincy at Salem, Reading at Revere, and Roslindale at Dorchester.

Boasting a record of 22 victories in 23 games, the greatest of the great Holy Cross ball nines invades the Hub today to do battle with Harvard at Soldiers' Field in the second game of their annual series. Today's game affords local fans their first peek at the best of all Crusader nines.

The Crusaders licked Harvard, 10 to 3, a week ago and this factor coupled with their enviable record makes the Mt. St. James boys favorites to win. This year's Holy Cross nine is led by Dickie Harrell, a Dorchester high product, and the fair-haired boy of the Twilight League here during the summer months.

Frank Nekola, outstanding college hurler of the year, faces the Crimson as Nekola parades around with a record that copes with that of his great team. In his 10 starts the undefeated southpaw has allowed only 13 hits and in his last workout for Boston College town with a solitary single.

BRAVES STILL TAKING IT ON THE CHIN

Pittsburgh, June 8—A waggish Pirate fan suggests that the Braves be nominated the Bat Nelsons of baseball, they are such gluttons for punishment. Perhaps the Joe Gimmes would be better. But used to win the majority of his bouts, while Joe never won any.

The Braves have performed slightly better than the one-time iron man of the Philadelphia ring but, of late, their record has been very much like his. Not since the opening days of the 1914 campaign has a Boston National team taken it on the chin with such startling regularity as have the Braves of this year. The Stallings crew of that glorious season lost 18 of the first 24 games they played and then went through the league like wildfire to win the flag and, later, capture the world's title in straight games.

Bobby Smith, who was held out of the second game, was to be the slugger today if he warms up to Assistant Manager Evers' satisfaction this afternoon.

'Fastest Human' Determined Today

Chicago, June 8 (AP)—The title of "world's fastest human" was within the reach of eight men comprising the most brilliant field of sprinters of the country as they awaited the final of the 100-yard dash in the eighth annual national collegiate track and field meet at Stagg Field today.

Two Western Conference speedsters, Eddie Tolan, Michigan negro star, and George Simpson, Ohio State flash, were to battle it out with a pair of Texans, Claude Bracey of Rice Institute, national collegiate champion, and Cy Leland of Texas Christian University.

Old Bike Record May Be Smashed

A RECORD that has stood for nearly 10 years is in extreme danger of being toppled, when five bikers, all listed among the greatest in the game, ride in the special hour race at the Revere Cycle Track tonight in an effort to erase George Wiley's mark of 45 miles 3 laps from the books.

Of the five riders, the fans seem to like the chances of George Chapman best. Chapple, the veteran, who has won the American motor-paced title six times, is riding better than ever this year and has captured the only two races of the season at the Revere oval. Furthermore, Chapple has several times come within a fraction of a lap of the record on previous attempts.

Counted upon to give Chapman his hardest fight for honors are Franz Duelberg, the German sensation, and Francesco Zucchetti, the Italian. Duelberg has taken part in both Revere races and his riding has been little short of sensational. Last week's race was only Duelberg's fifth behind motors. Previously he had ridden in sprints and road races. His rapid rise in the pace-following sport is the talk of the bike world.

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

Massachusetts' Golfers Are Facing Busy Week

GUILFORD WILL BEAR WATCHING

By BILL GRIMES

WITH tournaments scheduled for each day, golfers, amateur and professional, old and young, are confronted by one of the busiest periods of the season next week.

The opening engagement of the coming week will be the qualifying round for the United States open at the Worcester Country Club, on Monday. Due to the small field, which is of but mediocre caliber, the interest in the New England section qualifications centers, in Jesse Guilford, the Massachusetts open champion. Of the 57 who will play at Worcester a very small percentage have any business attempting to qualify for a United States open championship.

Guilford is staging a comeback and he will have the best wishes of his legion of friends at Worcester and Winged Foot. Willie Ogg and Charlie MacAndrews are apt to make the grade along with Guilford, while John Reinarth Bobby Cruickshank, Hosher Lagerblade, Bert Nevill, Jack Stait and Jack Shea should fight it out for the other four places allotted to New England.

The New England Senior Golfers' Association will open its annual championship, which will be a two-day affair, at the Woodland Golf Club, Tuesday, on which day the field Day of the Boston Four Ball League will be celebrated at the Rose Burn Country Club.

AS usual, the annual Albemarle Golf Club two-day open handicap medal play tournament starting on Wednesday, will attract a large field, which will be divided into four classes, with a gross and net prize for each division.

The Boston Newspapermen's Golf Association will hold its fourth tournament of the season on Wednesday at Wollaston, where, along with the regular medal play tournament, the qualifying round for the association championship will be held.

Thursday, the Weston Golf Club is putting on a father and daughter tournament, which promises to produce some stellar golf, as Miss Martha Brewer and Charles Brewer, Miss Ruth Rich and C. F. Rich and Miss Darthea Bryant and Joe Bryant are to compete.

There are three open handicap medal play tournaments on the Boston A. A. list for the week-end, Thorny Lee, Sharon and the Country Club of New Bedford.

Thorney Lea is advertising that $600 worth of prizes will be distributed for the best gross and net scores next Friday and Saturday. The Thorny Lea prizes include sterling silver pieces, matched irons and 36 pairs of shoes, and also a valuable suit of clothes for the player who breaks 70. Sharon will have its usual number of valuable and appropriate prizes, as will New Bedford.

Worcester Boxers in Dilboy Bouts

An interesting flavor has been injected into the Dilboy Post amateur boxing tournament, being held at Dilboy Field, Somerville, next Wednesday night, by the receipt of entries from several boxers residing in Worcester. It is expected that several more boys from the western part of the state will enter.

Six open classes are to be competed, 118, 126, 135, 147, 175 pounds and heavyweights. Entries for these classes may be forwarded to Dilboy Post, V. F. W., headquarters, K. of C. Building, Highland ave., Somerville.

MR. BOSTON
by JACK CONWAY

"MEN are now more fearful of getting fat than the ladies," Doc Jimmy Brown of Kelley & Hayes' Gym told Mr. Boston. "We bag the pro boxers from our gym mornings and hold classes for business men and others who wish to keep trim and in good health.

"I have one class which is composed of the members of an orchestra playing at one of the downtown theaters. The boys don't get much exercise playing music and so step into our gym for their daily dozen."

Jack Steadman, who assists the Doc in making the world healthy, declared that 10 years ago the ladies were the only ones who could find the time to attend gym classes.

"Now everybody is doing it," said Jack. "Perhaps the boys feel they require stronger constitutions to withstand the effects of some of the tough gin they are handing out."

Mr. Boston mentioned something about not having done any exercise in a gym since he attended the High School of Commerce in the somewhat distant past.

"But I get plenty of exercise in the open air," piped the veteran. "I dropped out to the Blue Hill Country Club the other day and breezed through 18 holes with Roy Taylor, former Tiger hockey star, who will be with the Bruins next year. Bob shot an 80 which Johnny Ford of Brookline, pro at Blue Hill, said was stepping right along.

"I believe golf has done more than its share in getting folks to exercise. You will find thousands of golf devotees on the links every afternoon. They have exchanged a grandstand seat at the ball park for a golf bag loaded with clubs.

"I'M for the plan to give Boston another municipal golf links. The present layout isn't able to accommodate one-tenth of those persons who want to play the game on a public course.

"I have lived in Boston all of my life and have not yet been able to get in a round of golf at the Franklin Park course. This is not because I have not tried to do so. I journeyed to the Franklin Park course on one occasion last season and after waiting for an hour to tee off I tossed in a towel and motored to one of the Cape courses.

"The city will benefit in the health of its citizens if it establishes another municipal links.

"I HAVE played on the public links at Brockton. The course there is one of the finest in New England.

"Worcester has always been strong for public links. George Lee former New England welterweight champion, is one of the low scorers at Worcester. That's what he says, anyhow."

LOU PENNEY was in a happy mood when he dropped in to helm Mr. Boston.

"Outdoor boxing went over big at the Revere Cycle Track," said Lou. "I am sure the shows at the beach will draw large crowds this summer. I intend to feature local talent. This means action.

"The so-called big clubs can have the stars, who usually don't shine very bright. Next week we're going to stage our show on Friday night so as not to conflict with the Fuller-Zeramby show, which will be held at Fenway Park on Thursday evening."

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Due to the cancellation of the Oaley four-ball tournament, the Blue and Red team match at Wollaston and the opening of the new nine hole unit at The Country Club are the outstanding attractions in golf today.

Along with the Red and Blue team match, the final round of the qualifications for the Wollaston Golf Club championship will be played today. With one round today, J. G. Hern and R. N. Hall are tied for first place with 320, while Charlie Crowley is trailing two strokes. The low 16 for the best four rounds will make the match play grade for the Montclair club championship.

Due to the renewed interest in club affairs at Wollaston, the largest crowd in years is expected at the Montcliff links for the get-together today.

While the Wollaston members are enjoying their old layout, the members of The Country Club will be trying out their new nine hole unit for the first time today. Judge Lowell will officially open the new unit by driving a ball down, or at, the first fairway.

Billy Arnold of Cohasset was well on his way to setting up a new record at Brockton yesterday until he met a thunder shower. Bill was out in 35, but ran into trouble on the homeward journey.

Jack Lowery's handicap was chipped four strokes by Fred Corcoran just before the Norfolker started his round at Brockton yesterday, and then to make it a perfect day for Lowery, a heavy thunderstorm hit him during his second round.

For most of the players who have entered for the qualifying round at Worcester it is but a waste of time and money. Only a few of the 57 entries have any business flirting around any qualification which leads up to a United States open championship.

Due to the fact that Henry Cuet does not have to qualify this year because of the fine showing he made at Olympia Fields last season, there is one more place open for the New Englanders.

FULLER IS SET FOR GO WITH ZERAMBY

Sammy Fuller, New England featherweight champion, is in the best condition of his career for his 10-round battle with Jake Zeramby of Lynn, which is to feature the Arena A. A. show at Fenway Park next Thursday night.

The little Italian scrapper, after boxing four burreaene rounds with Jackie Donohue and Eddie Thomas at Kelley & Hayes' Gymnasium, announced that he would box with them again today and rest Sunday in preparation for the final stages of his training sessions Monday after noon.

Zeramby, too, is whirling towards perfect condition. He trained at Wannest with Freddie O'Connor until Saturday morning, when he motored to Scituate, where he will remain until after the fight. Zeramby has been in the habit of training at Lake Quannapowitt, Wakefield, but has decided to change his training quarters.

Zeramby, who is a clever boxer, is expected to put up a fast battle with Fuller, who is a hard hitter. Both boys are confident of victory and are expected to go the limit.

EDGAR H. PETERSON, president of the Expansion Boat Club, has begun the moving spirit in the formation of a motor boat club at Lake Quannapowitt, Wakefield. Peterson is a member of the Lake Quannapowitt Yacht Club, and is one of the leading motor boat racers on the lake. He has been a prime mover in the Wakefield Regatta, which has been held annually on the lake for the past several years, and is one of the leading spirits in the Wakefield Athletic Association.

Peterson has been in touch with a number of motor boat owners on the lake, and has received assurances from a large number that they will enter their boats in the proposed club. The club will have a membership limited to 50, and will have a clubhouse on the lake. Peterson is also in touch with a number of motor boat owners on Lake Quannapowitt, and it is expected that a club will be formed there also.

IOWA PROBE MAY WRECK 'BIG 10'

Chicago, June 8 (AP)—As part of an inquiry to win reinstatement into the Western Conference (or Intercollegiate Conference, as it is officially called), Iowa today began an investigation that may or may not wreck its football, basketball and track teams.

E. T. Lauer, director of athletics, was here for a conference with Maj. Anson T. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the conference, to learn whether the conference had conclusive evidence that 12 Iowa athletes were guilty of professionalism, as rumored, and neither gave out information to the public by the conference.

If any of those men are guilty, Lauer said, they would be ineligible for the conference championship meets and would not be permitted to compete in dual meets.

Tad Describes How Fred Fulton Defeated Willie Meehan in Hectic 4-Round Squabble

For 20 years "Tad" [illegible] one of the greatest [illegible] and sporting authorities [illegible] ever lived, covered the [illegible] game. Shortly before his death "Tad" wrote and syndicated a series of stories describing [illegible] ringside style those ring battles which for thrills and sensation were stamped indelibly [illegible] mind. These stories, [illegible] out only eight nights [illegible] are at stake, but with [illegible] was stored in private [illegible] the smaller clubs. This story [illegible] one of the stories.

By TAD

Fred Fulton was given the decision over Willie Meehan by Referee Jim Griffin at the Civic Auditorium in San Francisco on June 25, after four rounds of ponderous squabbling. It was a good decision, Meehan, although he fought like a Spartan, was too short for his skyscraper opponent, and he ran second in most of the long-range exchanges.

Meehan did his best to make it a toe-to-toe thing, but Fulton, after just so much of that, would step away, cut Willie across the face with a left, then jab him five or six times more, while the willing Willie swung like a gate.

After seven preliminary bouts Fulton came down the aisle wearing that long pongee-silk-colored bathrobe. He was given a half-hearted reception.

A moment later Meehan, smiling and good natured, swaggered down the aisle with a slate-colored robe and the crowd went wild. Willie climbed through the ropes and boyishly sidled over to Fulton to shake his hands. They were both very good natured about everything.

Kid McCoy turned up his trousers, tossed off his coat and proceeded to rub the tall Mr. Fulton off to the different angles. Fulton wore a pair of black velvet trunks and Meehan wore loose, green-and-running pants. The fighters and referee, Jim Griffin, were introduced then George Hartley called time.

Meehan, with his head lowered like a bull, rushed right at Fulton, who was hardly out of his corner, and bit fly with both barrels. The crowd hardly expected such a thing and didn't warm up for a moment. Meehan continued rushing, and then Fulton spread his legs and made it a party. For fully half a minute they stuck in the tall plasterer's corner, and whaled away with rights and lefts in perfect rotation, like two amateurs.

It was great for the spectators. They simply went wild. Finally the men parted, both with red faces and mussed-up hair.

Fulton danced away a bit and Willie took another dive toward the plasterer's lunch. As he did a long, lean right reached over and bumped against his chin. It almost knocked him dead. Wee Willie reeled a bit, grabbed the rope and as a vicious left came his way ducked to a clinch.

Griffin broke them and Fulton fed him that cruel left again on the ear and under the chin. Willie was bouncing around like a drunken man, and many at the ringside predicted the thing would end in two rounds. A merciful bell came to Meehan's rescue, and he went to his corner sticking his tongue out like a boy and laughing.

Meehan rushed again as the bell rang in the second and got to close quarters immediately. His seconds yelled: "The elevator, Willie," and, immediately a right-hander, that started from some unknown section, went up in the air and then down upon the neck of Fulton. It was now. The crowd cheered wildly and Willie pulled it twice more without a return.

He backed Fulton into a neutral corner, worked right and left to the body and was doing great work. Fulton then let loose with left hand uppercuts and soon blood was seen to flow from Meehan's mouth. Fast to the left of Fulton's was bound to collect if the gal Fulton popped. Willie's head up with the left hand to clinch it with the right, on which Meehan, wore bristling bulldogs at the bell.

Willie walked right into close quarters again in the third, ripped two or three to the midriff and was then forced back. Fulton fed him the long, bony left flush on the chin. Willie retreated to the ropes. Fulton was on top of him in a second. He pushed Willie's face back over the ropes with his left and threw times failed to connect with the right.

Meehan danced in and out and was full of speed. Fulton cut his nose with a left then fed him five in a row. Meehan's seconds, who still had a few tricks left in the bag, yelled for the "Sassdrum." Once swinging molasses candy, and bang! a left landed on Fred's stomach. That drew a cheer, too.

Fulton took that and fed Meehan that left five or six times more sending Willie's head back and drawing blood from both his nose and mouth. Meehan tried to hold his right hand against the face of protest in against Fulton's left, whenever he did that, Fred shot a few attacks to the body and made it more vicious. He tried then to knock Meehan out but that [illegible] had too much heart. Willie could denly came to life then and rushed at Fulton, missed him with left and right ten feet, almost going out of the ring at the same time. The bell rang.

Fulton met Meehan coming out of his corner at the start of the last round and viciously stung him with lefts and rights. Willie was on one foot and then the other, keeping his balance. His face was covered with blood immediately. He lowered his head and tore in like a bull for Fulton's midriff. The crowd howled with joy.

Fulton backed away to a neutral corner and Meehan suddenly pulled off and unleashed up. Then, without a word of warning and while the sky was still clear, he sent a Li'l Bleeder sewing on Fulton, catching him flush on the chin, almost scaring him to death, and almost setting the house afire.

Fulton hit the ropes and bounced off. His fighting heart in the center of the ring at that moment he would have had resin upon his noggin's for nothing but the ropes [illegible] him up. Fulton recovered in a few seconds from the shock and, while the mob still roared, he beat up the poor, sore face of the fat tar until blood covered every inch of it.

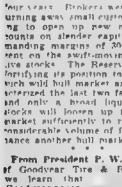
DULL DAYS IN WALL STREET EXPECTED

By FRANK H MELOON
Financial Editor

Brokers in Wall Street who not long ago were predicting days of 6,000,000 to 12,000,000 shares are talking now about seasonal dullness. These are signs in Wall Street that the stock market is about to enter the "dog days" of that may turn out to be the slowest and dullest summer in three or four years. Brokers were reported turning away small customers seeking to open up new margin accounts on slender capital and demanding margins of 20 to 25 per cent on the switchboard operative stocks. The Reserve Board is fortifying its position to block any such wild bull market as has characterized the last two full seasons and only a broad liquidation of stocks to sell them up in the money market sufficiently to release any considerable volume of funds to finance another bull market.

From President P. W. Litchfield of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co we learn that Goodyear's vice-president, Clifford P. Stone, has resigned to enter a new field, something few executives have been doing in recent months. President Litchfield says "Mr Stone is leaving to become associated with an Eastern financial group having large interests in the utility and industrial field.



P. W. Litchfield

Rubber companies continue to hold considerable lure for the average buyer, the "fly in the ointment" being over-expansion. This is a fault often repeated in the rubber field in the past.

U. S. Rubber, strongly entrenched in New England, is staging a vigorous recovery under the Penn control. For the first five months of this year sales of United States Rubber are well ahead of the same period a year ago. Unit sales show an even greater gain, and are quite substantially in excess of the results to May 31, 1928. The management is continuing its process of revamping its internal organization, centering on personnel and alignment of departments. Until the new operating basis is thoroughly grooved in, it is impossible to arrive at accurate earnings estimates and probably not until late summer will it be possible to obtain trustworthy figures of current earning power. For that reason no estimate of earnings for the half year after adjustments of $63,391 and a loss after adjustments of $10,963,625, the deficit, including preferred dividends, running up to $15,355,825.

President Alvan T. Simonds of the Simonds Saw & Steel Co., Fitchburg, who since 1923 has been in charge of the company, has offered $1500 annually for the best essay on an economic subject, is making a similar offer this year. The subject he proposes for 1929 is "The Federal Reserve System and the control of credit." The sum of $1000 is to be awarded the essay decided by the judges to be the best and $500 for the second best. The contest is open to everybody. The essay may be short or long but each must even exceed 2500 words in length, written in such a manner that it may be used as a separate magazine article.

Aim of the contest is to increase general economic intelligence especially on the part of business men. Mr. Simonds suggests that contestants consider the relative merits of the English banking system and its control of credit with those of our Federal Reserve System, and that they also make a study of the part that the cost of credit plays in advancing and retarding general welfare and prosperity.

All essays should be in the hands of the Economic Contest Editor, Simonds Saw & Steel Co., 470 Main st., Fitchburg, on or before December 31, 1929.

These are interesting statistics presented by President John M. Satterfield of the American Savings Bank, Buffalo: "The average life of a savings account is seven years. Every year approximately 15 per cent of the accounts in any bank are closed. To offset this loss in the number of depositors, a constant effort is made to enlist new depositors. The cost of getting new accounts ranges from $3 to $6 dollars. The cost of keeping and of closing an account of small amount not exceed three or four cents a month. A good return would be $1 of deposit for each cent of expense.

"Analysis shows that almost 80 per cent of the money in an average savings bank belongs to less than 10 per cent of the depositors, and about 70 per cent of the depositors have not been seen in the bank for six months or longer, and have never made as many as six deposits in any one year."

The busiest hour for business telephone communication occurs between 10 and 11 a. m. This should moment coming almost exactly at 10:30 in the majority of telephone exchanges serving business offices principally. From this time until 12:30 there is a sharp drop of almost 50 per cent in the traffic the line slowly rises until 3:30 p. m. when the afternoon peak is reached, with a slight rise between 4 and 5 p. m. sharply until at 11:30 p. m. the minimum is reached, continuing until 6:30 the next morning.

A slight variation of this maximum use is observed in telephone exchanges that serve chiefly residential sections. Here the peak of use comes at 9:30 in the morning at which time women are ordering their supplies for the day and making various appointments with friends and others for the days work. From this point of high use there is a very sharp drop to approximately 2:30, after which the use rises fairly sharply until 7:30 p. m. when another peak occurs approximately 75 per cent of the morning peak. This is the time of night when people are making appointments for the next morning, after which there is almost a perpendicular fall until the minimum is reached at 11:30 p. m. as in the case of business offices.

U. S. Bureau of Standards supplies us with a report on ethyl gasolines which appears to set at rest the rumors and "inside information" in circulation regarding them. The report says: "The use of tetraethyl lead as an anti-knock compound has made an extensive study of the fuels and as ethyl gasolines by undergoing the gift such fuels are commercial gasolines to which have been added small amounts of ethyl fluid, the ethyl brand of anti-knock compound. The maximum amount of tetraethyl lead used in commercial ethyl gasoline is said to be 1 part in 1300 by volume. When tetraethyl lead alone is added to gasoline, lead oxide deposits tend to accumulate on spark plugs and valve guides. Ethyl fluid therefore contains certain other chemicals, added to prevent this lead oxide formation

* * *

The sole effect of adding ethyl fluid to a given gasoline is to lessen the tendency of the gasoline to knock or detonate. The volatility of the gasoline, its heat value, and its chemical composition are unchanged. Under certain conditions, and in certain engines the untreated gasoline could be used because the spark was excessively retarded. In such cases the use of ethyl gasoline permits normal spark advance without detonation and thereby improves power and fuel economy. If the knock is due to carbon deposits gasoline removes the knock but not the carbon.

* * *

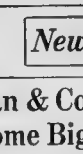
The Bureau has operated several test engines on gasoline containing ethyl fluid without any apparent harmful effects so far as fuel system, valves, and spark plugs are concerned. While none of these engines has been operated steadily on ethyl gasoline for sufficient time to warrant a positive statement that the long continued use of this fuel does no injury to the engine,

Morgan & Co. Promise to Become Big Utility Factor

By B. C. FORBES

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. June 8 — J. P. Morgan & Co promise to become the towering power in the utility industry.

What will be the ultimate importance of the announcement of the end of other far-reaching developments now being rushed through at a breakneck speed remains to be seen, but I believe that the new move is about to enter the "dog days" of that may turn out to be the slowest and dullest summer in three or four years. Brokers were reported turning away small customers seeking to open up new margin accounts on slender capital and demanding margins of 20 to 25 per cent on the switchboard operative stocks. The Reserve Board is fortifying its position to block any such wild bull market as has characterized the last two full seasons and only a broad liquidation of stocks to sell them up the money market sufficiently to release any considerable volume of funds to finance another bull market.



B. C. Forbes

What is going on is this. The hundreds of electric light and power companies scattered throughout the country as well as gas companies are being brought under the handful of very big corporations that are almost daily becoming still bigger. The prospect is that before long there will be only half a score, and later not more than a dozen, of these extensively utility corporations or groups of corporations.

Looking further ahead one can see looming the concentration of America's utility enterprises into only two or three gigantic combines by the most influential financial interests in the land, including notably the Morgans and Mellons.

* * *

Now, the Socialist attitude towards such concentration of economic power is pressing the utility field as well as in certain other fields is "Go ahead and insist only that they shall be run in the public interest." Go ahead and insist only that they shall be run in the public interest." Go ahead and insist only that they shall be run in the public interest."

CHEMISTRY BIG BOON TO FISH INDUSTRY

A substantial block of the common stock of Atlantic Coast Fisheries Company will be offered shortly by Jackson & Curtis, Hallgarten & Co., Hopkins & Co., Tucker Anthony & Co. and Curtis & Sanger. Through fish canning researches science has revolutionized and made profitable one of the world's oldest industries, Dr. Haven F. Taylor, vice-president of Atlantic Coast Fisheries Company and formerly chief technologist of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, has developed a process which now makes it possible to deliver to the consumer in the Middle West deep sea fish eveen fresher in condition than that sold in Fulton Market, New York.

Through the Taylor process caught solely by Atlantic Coast Fisheries fillets of haddock and other fish may be shipped to the Middle West or in the East and stored for six months or considerably longer with no appreciable loss of flavor, weight or color. As a result of the new processes, the company has a demand for its products considerably in excess of its present capacity. Expansion plans have resulted in the increase in sales which last year, were nearly $8,000,000, with a corresponding doubling of net earnings.

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Market views of brokers follow

Hayden, Stone & Co.: We have a decidedly mixed situation that is apt to be represented in the conflicting movements of various groups of issues. Opportunities no doubt exist, as is usually the case, but this is not so plentiful as formerly and should result from indiscriminate choice

Clark, Dodge & Co.: There are some indications that Federal reserve authorities are now committed to an easier money policy. The manner in which the additional demand for money will be met, however, is still a matter of considerable uncertainty, and after the present rally has spent its force a period of irregularity and comparative dullness would be a logical development. But many stocks appear attractive enough to serve as guideposts of the general stock market situation.

Hornblower & Weeks: Although yesterday's market undertook the selling pressure in a satisfactory manner we cannot help thinking that it developed definite signs of being temporarily tired, and we would not be surprised to see a reasonable reaction, which we rather expected early in the week, take place. The buying power is still present, however, we anticipate that today's short session will be dull and hesitant and that the stock market will have recently borne the leadership in the recovery movement will tend to encourage further realizations.

Tucker, Anthony & Co.: The near time prospect is for continued sportiness. Profit taking in industries would not be surprising nor would a resumption of buying in rails, coppers, or oils. The latter are likely to react favorably to President Hoover's conference of governors, who are slated for next week, for purposes of discussing oil conservation

BOND TRADING IS LIGHT

New York June 8 (AP) Trading bonds was exceptionally light in today's stock exchange dealings and moved irregularly lower in the absence of support for all but a few issues.

Convertibles were dull American I. G. Chemical 5½s, market leader a week ago, showed four points several weeks ago, showed four points, time and were bought at close of yesterday's session. The Int Int American and International Telephone 4½s also showed little variation.

Liberty bonds and the Treasury issues were lower, no block new to the interest. Other sections of the list, including the foreign, were equally quiet although the Chicago Land Union Terminal 5s picked up nearly a point on the appearance of some inquiry.

New York Central lines has placed an order with the American Locomotive Company for 50 engines, aggregating about $11,000,000

Shawmut Corp. Wins Gardner Loan Bid

Gardner awarded to Shawmut Corp. a $100,000 loan dated June 7 and due November 14. This Day in Our History

ANDREW JACKSON, seventh President of the United States, died at his residence, "The Hermitage," near Nashville, Tenn., on June 8, 1845. It is said of Jackson that he left office far more popular than when he was elected President. His sterling qualities soon became evident to all.

The Newport Girl — by Gilbert Rogers — A SIX-DAY STORY

Love on Sands of Famous New England Resort

He was called to the phone on morning by Mrs. Strake herself.

"Felicity's come back," she said

Nick's heart leaped in his throat

"I'll come right over," he cried

"Why—why—what do you mean?" he faltered miserably.

"She feels different about you I told her everything—how I'd sen you to see that girl. It didn make any difference. She says sh doesn't want to see you again."

"But I've got to see her, I've got to!"

"Nick, let me take care of thing She'll come around if you'll giv her time. She was always the way, even as a child, moody an quick to take offence. If you push things now, you'll ruin everything o I'll take her back to Newport. Yo can write her in a few days. I'll do my best, Nick. I'm dreadfu sorry."

* * *

Zoe felt sorry for him.

"You're a white man" she sai "and listen, I'm going to earn m keep. I can cook. Yes, I can. Yo wouldn't believe that, would you Well, when I scramble an egg, the egg gets scrambled, believe me"

She did somehow manage to pu together an appetizing little mea that evening, though Nick ate n if he did not know what he wa eating.

"Look here," he said, "you ca stay here as long as you like, as you what you want. But I don want you to talk like that, or abou —about me."

Three days went by, and Zo made no effort to leave. Nick ha taken to sleeping at his club, bu he was in the apartment each da It never crossed his mind to wo der at their odd relationship.

But Zoe was more alive to thi "I don't think he even sees me she thought.

It was the next morning the the letter Nick had finally sent t was returned in a plain envelop It had not even been opene When he thought of the agon with which he had written it, th desperate plea he had put into it a kind of despair came over him. He sat silent for hours, then s

Nick remembered. It was the manager of the importing house whom he had interviewed almost a month ago, and who had told him there might be a chance for him to go to Porto Rico.

"Hello, young man. I was wondering what had happened to you, and why you didn't come in. We mislaid your address. That West Indian appointment is open. If you'll come down to my office at the end of the week, we'll arrange matters."

"Thanks," said Nick. "Oh, yes. Thanks."

Meanwhile Zoe was watching out of the window for him. Something was happening to Zoe. She was falling in love.

Underneath her hardness she was sentimental enough. She had fallen in love almost too often, it might be, but she had never fallen in love with anyone quite like Nick Prescott.

Perhaps she saw that he, too, was a lover. Perhaps she was jealous of the homage his suffering egg got, without you," she blurted out suddenly.

But he did not understand or did not care to. "You're welcome to this place, and I'll leave the furniture in it. I'm paid up till October."

"I didn't mean that," she said in a lower tone. He had hurt her, and because of that, she loved him now more than she had before. more perhaps than she had loved any other man.

Her big eyes watched every movement he made, and he never saw her watching.

All at once he noticed that she was crying. He looked at her in mute astonishment.

He freed himself, and now he was staring at her as if he had seen her at last.

"You don't know what you're saying," he said. "You don't love me. Why—that's—"

She cried out something inarticulately and tried to kiss him again, but he pushed her away.

"I don't love you," he said harshly. "Don't you understand—I don't love you. This isn't the way to—to forget."

When late in the evening, Nick returned, he found Zoe had gone. But his books were on the floor, his pencil broken, his belongings smashed, or mutilated, as if a madman or a wild animal had run amok in the apartment.

He was too indifferent to care.

Felicity now that there was peace in the big house, found it easier to reason. She knew she must face life from now on with fortitude.

In that mood and spirit Jacob Gram found her these days. He was with her almost steadily so that she found his thoughtful, intelligent friendship was a habit she liked.

She knew by this time that Jacob Gram was the man her mother wished her to marry—she who was married already.

Then one day, near twilight, when she had returned from golf, her mother sent for her.

Something you may have thought I was very unsympathetic about everything. But I just didn't know what to do. Felicity, you are willing to go to Paris—to get your divorce?"

"Yes, mother."

Mrs. Strake could not restrain a sigh of relief.

"Then I shouldn't talk to you about another thing," she went on. "I want to talk to you about Jacob Gram."

"You want me to marry him!" cried Felicity suddenly.

"If I've got to marry, what difference does it make."

"He loves you, Felicity."

"I would be glad if he didn't. I don't love him."

"You may learn to love him."

Felicity threw a glance of such weary meaning that Mrs. Strake was conscious of a blunder and attempted to repair it.

"But even if you don't, it would be splendid for you, for all of us. He's well, mother."

"He's here now, Felicity. He's waiting. Will you see him?"

"Mother has talked to me," she said; "I want to tell you the truth, and I'm sure I'm telling it well nor love you. But I like you. I enjoy being with you. If after my divorce you still—still want me, I want to marry me, I—I will do so."

Jacob Gram moved nearer. He drew her close.

But suddenly she whipped her hand away from him. She was pearly white.

"You mustn't kiss me!" she cried. "I don't want you to kiss me!"

Suddenly she burst into tears and ran from the room. That evening Mrs. Strake waited for reservations in the morning she and Felicity set out for New York. They were sailing for Paris the next day. Jacob Gram had gone in ahead of them by an early train.

* * *

Zoe Gale had gone to the Madrid Club. She was greeted by old acquaintances. She laughed, smiled, and drank hard.

"Oh, I'm so unhappy! I wish I were dead!" she said to herself over and over.

She went to a theatrical hotel where she was known, and the liquor she had drunk at least made her sleep. In the morning when she awoke, she ordered breakfast, and read the paper.

"Sailing on the Olympic: Mrs. Frank Strake, Miss Felicity Strake, also . . ."

That girl was here in New York! That girl whom Nick loved, for whom he was going away to bury himself in Porto Rico.

Zoe was a woman who never greatly wanted anything unless it were denied to her. She wanted very much to sail on the Olympic. Without considering why, she rose and dressed hurriedly and took a cab to the wharf.

She discovered Felicity in a big stateroom, alone, her hands clenched white, a look of fear and despair upon her face. It was the face of someone who has lost hope, and everything.

For one moment Zoe stared. Then something happened to her. The hard mask came through, and all the frustration. The lost love in that girl's face, the misery in those eyes—it was like the look Nick had! A tide of pity came over Zoe, and generosity and remorse took her storm.

"Do you remember me? I'm Zoe Strake, do you remember me? I've come to tell you about Nick. Wake up! I tell you there is no time to lose!"

Then she poured it out, the whole story, in loose disjointed phrases, in fragments and gestures that were pure, it is the truth. He came there at night to argue with me about your foul brother, I never saw him before. Then Glenn came to see me. He paid me to bust in on Nick, and stay there with him. Since he died. And I lied to you when you came there that day. And Nick's been out of his head since—I thought he was going crazy, and you always sending his letters back unopened!"

"Where is he? Oh, where is he?"

"I'm telling you you haven't got much time. He's sailing for Porto Rico this morning. He may be gone."

"Oh," cried Felicity. "Help me please, help me!"

Someone had stepped into the room. It was Mrs. Strake, Felicity was on her feet at her approach, but in that look Mrs. Strake read her own defeat.

Zoe turned, fighting to the last. "Felicity, please, wait—it was for your own good—you mustn't—Nick loves you, he's no farther. The look in her daughter's eyes was something the inside all enterprise too futile to be spoken into. Mrs. Strake's defeated mind, with victory torn from her fingers, there was no time, no more thought. Certainly she saw the future of that moment. Jacob Gram? He would be through with her, she knew, in his calm, ruthless way.

Mrs. Strake saw her doom, but not how it was to be sealed. After at one last straw.

"Your father . . ." she began.

"I shall write to him to join me, as soon as I am settled."

Then she was gone. She was gone, and she had not even said good-by!

Zoe and Felicity had pushed their way through the crowds on the gangplank, and hurried, raced for the street.

Then they were in a cab. "Go faster!" she cried. "Oh, why doesn't the fool go faster?"

And Felicity said nothing. But her heart was beating as if it would burst. The pier at last! A few neck-bands retaining Zoe's frantic questions. One of the men pointed.

The dingy fruit boat was in midstream and under power. Then Zoe caught people's arms, insisted, exclaimed, showered money about, behaved like a madwoman, scolded, threatened, begged.

Felicity scarcely knew what happened. She stared at the liner they were pursuing. Presently she found herself climbing up the side on a long, swaying ladder, whose steps wouldn't keep still.

There were faces peering at her, faces. They resolved into one face, that stared unbelieving, that looked down with a mouth that was unsteady.

She was on the deck at last. She was in his arms at last. Before them all he held her. What need to explain now? That could come later. Only she knew she was happy, happy!

Her eyes were wet still. "It's just your wife when come aboard, Nick," she said with a little tremulous laugh.

And still he looked at her silently, with that look that, too great, as if this were a vision, that might break, that might vanish at a word.

THE END.

HIDDEN FIRES — by Aileen de Vilbiss

CHAPTER 28.

THE shadow of a woman swaggered into the dim beam of light which came from the study lamp through the open door.

"What about the wife you already have, Don Carlos? Better get rid of her, if you can. Before you annex another. Like a whip across a bare back came the word—words with a hidden menace. "Better get rid of her—if you can!" Don Carlos rose.

"Herself! Permit me to congratulate you on your technique in love-making, Don Carlos. It has improved since I left. I've often heard that the Hawaiian moon is responsible for many things, such as stolen hearts. Still, one could hardly blame you. I heard she was pretty—in a dark sort of way."

Eve had been quickly appraising Eugenie, who sat as though turned to stone in the huge peacock chair.

Don Carlos' wife had always been a myth to Eugenie Nahuli. He had told her once of the bitterness born of his marriage, and there the matter had been dropped.

And now she stood before them. Eve, his wife, just the moment before he had been telling Eugenie of his love; that he wanted her to be his wife. Strange, this life, which gave rights to some that belonged to others.

She arose quietly and turned to Don Carlos.

"If you will call a cab for me, I'll be going."

Don Carlos looked at her, appealingly for her sympathy and understanding. There was nothing he could say, and in an instant he turned to the house to call the cab.

"I shall see you tomorrow, Eugenie," he suggested when he returned.

"Yes," Eugenie assured him.

"Freak, dear, that woman," she commented when Don Carlos returned to her. "Is that a new island style, that long white figure she has on her? Good thing I brought a trunkful of my own clothes."

The thought ran through Don Carlos' mind that the Eves of this world never could appreciate the pure classic grace of women like Eugenie.

"Why have you come, Eve?" he asked, quietly. He wondered how he could keep his tones so low when every nerve in him was shrieking.

"A cool sort of a welcome, I call it. After I have traveled a couple of thousand miles just for the pleasure of calling on you. And paid my own fare down, too." Eve did not add, however, that George Phillips had advanced her the fare. "Why have you come?" he repeated in a dead tone.

"To cause you trouble," Eve frankly told him. I know you don't want me. But that doesn't matter. I'm still your wife, you know. And my place is here by your side, now that you are able to take on a wife. I should be slaving at a typewriter in old Pollock's office while you are down here getting your name in electric lights on the Honolulu Theatre. No, sir-ee. I've come down to live off the fatted calf for a while myself."

"Never!" Don Carlos spat the one word. "What's that?" Eve was stirred to action; she sat on the edge of the chair. "What do you mean, never? Huh?"

"I mean that you'll never live with me again."

"Yes, that's so. Why couldn't you have stayed on the mainland, Eve? You had George Phillips there—my worthy successor. Well, why didn't you stay with him? I've sent you money since I've been making it. I paid my obligations to you. I've been helping save finances. I'll pay that debt, but by the gods, I tell you, Eve, that it stops there. I'm through with you, with your way of living. Fight! Fight! Fight! That's your idea of a home—to keep it in a constant state of eruption. Why did you have to come back into my life right now just when I had found happiness—"

"Oh, that's the angle! The poor wife is thrown out in the cold while hubby's lover who was taken her place in her husband's heart and home—"

"I'll put you out of the islands, although I would do even that if I could that's how much I want you out of the country. If you don't get a divorce, I'll sue for one. You'll never have another chance to wreck my life."

The words had been pouring from Don Carlos mouth like molten lava from a crater. At the end of it, he seemed to had said everything there was to be said.

"That's all? Where are you stopping, Eve?"

Even natures like Eves know when they have met their match. There was no use trying to talk to him tonight. Why bother about him? Wasn't Colonel Drinkwater her devoted slave?

At the Moana, she surrendered. "I'll call a cab for you, dear. If you want to get in touch with me again, you know where to find me."

What Has Happened So Far

Don Carlos Whiting goes to Hawaii after he discovers that his wife, Eve, is carrying on an affair with George Phillips, a neighbor. On landing in the island he is accosted by David Nahuli, who offers him $2000 for delivering a black bag. He meets Eugenie, Nahuli's white wife, and Selma Wiker, crippled mother of an unusual family, which includes a daughter, Ruth. The latter marries Al Harding, much to the disgust of her father, Big Tim Wilson. Nahuli orders him to carry the black bag again. Eugenie invites him to her cottage. She tells him she has been delivering opium and warns him. Among revelations is that Nahuli forced her to marry him to save her father from prison. Don Carlos spends his time working on a play which proves a big success. He and Eugenie fall in love. On Ruth's wedding day Big Tim goes on a vacation—disgusted. David learns of the affair between his wife and Don Carlos. But before he can bring about revenge he meets his death. Then, as Don Carlos and Eugenie are happy together, Eve arrives from the States.

Love Test -:- Intriguing Short Story by Jack Woodford

TARLETON just had to know. It tortured him morning, noon and night. This thought that, after all, Carlotta might have retained just a wee bit of affection for Jack, after her marriage to him.

It had taken her a long, long time to make up her mind whether it was to be Jack, or whether it was to be him. If she had been so uncertain who she loved, before her marriage, might it not be that after it, a little love for Jack might still remain?

Tarleton and Carlotta had been married just three months.

Theirs was the sort of happiness that makes people afraid. People who are only moderately in love find nothing in the world is ever quite as perfect as the utter happiness they felt.

At last, after many misgivings, Tarleton decided to test Carlotta. Afterward, he could beg her forgiveness; indeed, the forgiveness scene would be sweet, ever so sweet.

He took up the 'phone on his desk and told the switchboard girl to give him a line. He called his house. It was simplicity itself to imitate Jack's voice—Jack, his chum . . . They'd gone through college together. Made the same frats, played on the same teams.

"Hello," he called, imitating Jack's voice to perfection as a voice answered at the other end of the wire. "This is Jack. It's a wonderful day. How about a ride through the park?"

"Oh, I don't think I ought to . . ."

"Oh, come out of it. Surely you're not taking him seriously, still . . . Be a sport, Carlotta. Be a pal. Just a cozy little ride together, for old times sake. And, perhaps, just a bit, just a wee bit, of necking."

"Ohhhhh!" the voice said at the other end.

"Tell you what I'll do. I'll get the taxi and be waiting in it at the Webster ave. entrance to the park. That's a quiet street. There won't be anybody else around there. What say?"

"Why, I . . ."

"All right. I'll be there."

Tarleton slammed up the receiver.

"Sa!" he said to himself. He might have known all that wonderful happiness had a crack in it somewhere, as Emerson put it somewhere. Now he knew the worst of her life. If she was very, very contrite, maybe he wouldn't divorce her.

Forty-five minutes later, Tarleton sat gnawing his knuckles, in a taxi, at the Webster ave. entrance to the park. Nothing happened. After an additional wait of 15 minutes, a gorgeous creature jumped into the cab. But it wasn't Carlotta.

She looked at him in astonishment. He looked at her in astonishment. Then she let out a little scream. It was most embarrassing. People might think—the driver might think . . .

And then, horror of horrors, Tarleton saw Carlotta. She had stepped her coupe at the red lights and, about to enter the park, she was directly alongside the cab. She often went driving in the morning. In the little coupe he had bought her. And she always entered the park drive at the Webster ave. entrance.

The strange beauty got out of the taxi and fled. Carlotta got out of her coupe and came around to the taxi. Her face was that of the Gorgon. But it didn't turn Tarleton to water; it turned him into ice. He began explaining—with gestures.

"That's a fine story!" she observed, when he got through. "You called up to test me, got a wrong number and some other woman who had had lolled on the phone thinking it was me, met you thinking that you were some buck that she knew . . ."

And she would listen to no explanation. She got into her car and drove away, leaving Tarleton staring after her, thoughtfully outlining a campaign for forgiveness which started with candy and flowers and ended with a new fur coat and a real pearl necklace.

Several blocks down the way Carlotta stopped and picked up the girl who had gotten into the cab with Tarlton.

"Guess that'll cure him of any more test ideas he may have," Carlotta laughed. "Poor dear—she added softly.

Good Desserts to Give Children in Hot Weather

AS the temperature is on the incline the appetite usually starts to wane until often an individual feels he can get along very nicely on a glass of lemonade and a dish of fresh fruit.

These foods go into he cooling and they are, but unfortunately they lack the necessary food stuffs required to keep the body in good condition. No matter how hot it may be, the engine of the body or the stomach must keep up its regular work.

The heart must pump the blood through the system, the lungs must take care of the intake of the air and the kidneys must take care of the waste matter in order that we may live. Therefore, we must have fuel or food in order to keep these human machines in constant repair and good operation.

Children especially, refuse to eat the proper foods during the summer. They seem to desire deserts, light, frivolous foods and will cry and fuss when mother insists that they eat a well balanced meal.

Eggs and milk may be so camouflaged in the preparation of attractive desserts that unbeknown to the child or individual, the necessary foods will be eaten with real gusto. Custards—frozen, baked or boiled, served with crushed fruit will bring up an otherwise incomplete meal. Home-made ice cream is infinitely better for the child than the purchased product, as whole milk, eggs and fresh fruits may be used in the preparation, thereby offering real food in addition to the pleasure one gets when eating these desserts.

Ameists and souffles are other types of desserts that offer food value as well as tempt. Gelatin desserts such as Spanish custard, Bavarian creams and Parisian custards should be included in a summer diet as they are a nutritious dessert. However, it is well to serve at least one hot dish at each meal. This may be in the form of a creamed vegetable or meat dish or a hot custard served with a fruit sauce.

FOUNDATION CUSTARD RECIPE

2 cups milk — 4 tbsps. granulated sugar
2 eggs — ½ tsp. salt.
½ tsp. flavoring

Scald milk in double boiler. Beat the eggs slightly. Add the remaining ingredients and stir in the milk. Return to double boiler and stir constantly until custard is thickened sufficiently to coat the spoon. Cool, add flavoring and chill thoroughly.

BAKED CUSTARD

Use the ingredients in the same proportions as for the Foundation Recipe. Scald the milk and add to the slightly beaten eggs. Add the remaining ingredients, strain into a buttered baking dish or individual cups. Sprinkle the top with cinnamon. Stand in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees F., until puffy and firm. When a silver knife blade inserted in the center comes out clean, they are done. Cool and then chill. Serve plain or with fresh fruit sauce.

SPANISH CREAM

Whites 3 eggs.
Yolks 3 eggs.
1 tsp. vanilla or desired flavoring.

Scald milk with gelatin, add sugar, pour slowly on yolk of eggs slightly beaten. Return to double boiler and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from range. Add salt, flavoring and whites of eggs beaten stiff. Turn into individual molds, first dipped in cold water, and chill. Serve with cream. More gelatin will be required if large molds are used.

ON YOUR OUTING GIVE THOUGHT TO THESE

Don't forget when you are playing over your favorite golf course, when you are trekking through some cool deep woodland, when your children are playing care free, strong and happy in open meadow or on some beach, that back line in the crowded city streets thousands of little children are playing among ash cans and wading in the gutters, their rivers made from the overflow of some water wagon.

One day, one week and sometimes a month or more when needed are given them free or almost free by many social organizations in Boston. These days in God's open country put new life and faith in them bodies and souls today and forever, for the memory will live with them through all the years.

These societies in Boston appeal to you to help them to help the kiddies live again. In helping them you help yourself for your act of generosity tends to create a better society. Give to the world all that you have and all will come back to you.

Prominent Pastor Is Quietly Married

The Rev. William D. Goble of the First Baptist Church, Central st., Cambridge, was quietly married last Tuesday to Miss Ellen Dawson, who has for the last two years assistant in the Holyoke Baptist Church. She is a graduate of the Newton Theological Institution and is a native of Ohio. The marriage took place at the home of the bride's aunt on Beacon st., with a few relatives and friends present. The two have gone south for a short honeymoon trip and will return in time for Dr. Goble to preach June 16. This minister was left with a small family two years ago when his first wife died in Cambridge. The Rev. Arrington Fershee, home secretary for the Baptist conference in Greater Boston, will occupy the pulpit tomorrow.

Baptists Ordain Eddy in Randolph

George Norman Eddy was ordained to the Baptist ministry at the First Baptist Church in Randolph. He is now a member of the senior class at Gordon Theological Seminary.

Dr. E. H. Byington of the college, offered the invocation and gave the charge to the candidate. The Rev. E. S. Philbrook, pastor of the church, gave the scripture reading and the welcome to the ministry was delivered by the Rev. Isaac Higginbottom of Wollaston. The prayer of ordination was given by the Rev. Dr. Nathan E. Wood.

Churches to Observe Children's Day

With many churches tomorrow is Children's Day. Scenes of morning services will be devoted to the interests of boys and girls who have been in the church schools through the year. Eloquent sermons will be preached on the need for religious education, on the sacredness of home, and on the value of early training of the young.

In modern churches that have kept abreast of the times the church school has come to be as carefully supervised and regulated as public and parochial schools.

Episcopal School Graduation Thursday

The Rev. Wilbur Crosby Bell, D. D., of the Alexandria theological school, Alexandria, Va., will preach the baccalaureate sermon of the Episcopal school, Cambridge, next Thursday morning, 11 o'clock. An alumni luncheon comes at 1 o'clock and a meeting of the alumni at 2. Dinner at 6. An early 8 o'clock communion service will be held at 8 a. m.

Children's Day at First Methodist

The Rev. A. F. Reimer, city missionary of local Methodism, will preach at the First Methodist Church, Temple st., tomorrow morning in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Harry Belmont Hill, who has just landed in Europe with his wife for a much needed vacation. Dr. Reimer is interested in pressing funds for children's vacations. In the evening 25 children will present the pageant "Love's Gifts."

Father and Children, Rev. Macnair's Topic

"A Father's Estimate of His Children" will be the subject for a sermon by the Rev. William M. Macnair of the Prospect Church, Cambridge, tomorrow morning in recognition of Children's Sunday. Two hundred church school boys and girls will attend this service. In the evening there will be a concert by the children. The school during last winter averaged 250.

Brookline Minister Has Magnet Lesson

The Rev. William R. Leslie of St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal Church, Brookline, will talk to the church school tomorrow morning on "Christ the Magnet." He will have before him two tables with various metal objects. With a large magnet in his hand he will show the children how some materials will be attracted to the magnet while others may be repelled.

Smiles Vacation Brings

Joy depicted in the faces of these two city boys was produced by an invitation to go down to Beach Bluffs, Nantasket, for a summer vacation. The Catholic Charitable Bureau sends hundreds of Children to the shore each summer to hear what the wild waves are saying, and incidentally to build up in health and moral vigor. There are plenty of children left in the city each season who would be glad to smile like these boys.

PRES. HOOVER WRITES TO WIDOW

Will Be Assistant at Trinity Church

The Rev. Otis R. Rice has been called by the wardens of Trinity Church to become assistant minister, following the resignation of the Rev. Gardiner M. Day. Mr. Rice is a graduate of Harvard University and the Episcopal Seminary in Cambridge. He is the son of a Universalist minister. Young Mr. Rice will be ordained to the priesthood next Wednesday. This summer he will be executive councilor of the Sir Galahad Camp in East Sebago, Me.

At 11 a. m. tomorrow, the Rev. Henry K. Sherrill will preach in Trinity church and at 7:30 the preacher will be the Rev. Gardiner M. Day.

A letter from the President of the United States to Mrs. Pallen, widow of the late Catholic writer and poet Dr. Conde Benoist Pallen of New York, at the time of the funeral service was appreciated by the bereaved woman. Mr. Hoover's letter was one of sympathy:

"White House,
"Washington,
"May 27, 1929

Mrs. Conde Benoist Pallen,
Blackstone Hotel,
New York City.

"My dear Mrs. Pallen:

"In these dark first moments of your sorrow I hesitate to write to you because I have not had the privilege of acquaintance with you and your late husband, but I can not forbear to send you my sincerest sympathy and to say how great is, I feel, the public loss of the whole country in the death of one who gave so largely to the men and women of his time of the rich fruits of a sincere and high-minded search for the everlasting truths. I pray that such thoughts as these may help you bear your loss.

"Yours faithfully,
"Herbert Hoover."

UNANIMOUS DECISION TO UNITE

Congregationalists and Christians may soon become one and inseparable, a single body with but one head.

At the Detroit conference of Congregationalists last week, where six hundred delegates and two hundred other prominent clergymen and laymen gathered, a unanimous vote was taken to accept a suggestion made by the Christian communicants in the United States to unite. These are in this country 850,000 Congregationalists and 120,000 belonging to the Christian denomination. Although the Christians will not take a formal vote until next October at their annual meeting, it is practically certain that the combination will be voted on favorably. Plans are already laid for a general council of Congregational and Christian churches to convene at Hartford, Ct., in 1931, when the entire scheme of unity will be worked out. At the Hartford meeting there will be two moderators and two sets of officials.

Already the American Board of Foreign Missions with headquarters at 14 Beacon st. is preparing itself to take over all of the foreign mission work of the Christian church.

About 75 Massachusetts Congregationalists attended the Detroit gathering, and many of the clergymen will report on proceedings in their pulpits and in class rooms tomorrow.

Church School Plans Graduation Sunday

The First Baptist Church in Newton Center will devote church service tomorrow morning to the children of the church school. The pastor, Rev. Charles N. Arbuckle, will tell illustrative stories, and Everett Green, who has completed ten years as superintendent of the school, will tell of progress. Dr. Arbuckle is one of the teachers in the Baptist Theological Institution and is able to draw volunteer teachers from this school. Every one of the classes is very carefully graded.

WAGE-EARNERS INCREASE OUTPUT

The Catholic Welfare Conference in a recent issue of its bulletin draws attention to the need for a just distribution of the fruits of production. The document says:

"Each American wage-earner produces on the average a half more than he turned out nine years ago, according to a report presented to the committee on recent economic changes. The percentage increase is given as 53.5 and it is contrasted with the gain in production per wage-earner of 4.7 per cent in the preceding 20 years.

"Combined they show that wage-earners are producing nearly three-fifths more than 30 years ago, and that nearly all of this gain has come in the last 10 years. The gain has come largely through the use of better machinery, better power and better management.

"Here appear the elements of the new industrial revolution in the United States. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, declares that the yearly output of the American worker is $3200 and of the European worker $1500.

"Under such conditions there is certainly that, except for rare instances, there is no excuse for poverty in the United States. The problem becomes one of distributing income justly and equitably."

Cornerstone to Be Laid in Belmont

A cornerstone of a new parish house for the Payson Park Congregational Church, Belmont, will be laid tomorrow noon at the conclusion of the "regular service. The new parish house will be large and sufficient to house a chapel, auditorium, dining room, recreation room, parlors, offices and classrooms. Monday the contractors will take over the present church to enlarge the auditorium. The Payson Park Congregational Church was organized in 1913.

Edwin Markham

This poet whose poem, "The Man With the Hoe," is known throughout the world, and who is known for other writings and poems, will speak both morning and evening at the Copley Methodist Church tomorrow. In the morning he will give readings from his nature poems, and in the evening, besides reading poems, he will be given a reception. The public is cordially invited.

July 4th Is Date to Close Retreat

A retreat for teachers will be held during the last days of June at the Academy of the Assumption, Oakland st., Wellesley Hills. Fr. Stinson, S. J., will conduct the exercises this year. The retreat opens on the evening of Saturday, June 29, and closes after breakfast July 4.

PREPARING FOR DORCHESTER'S TERCENTENARY

Nine Congregational churches of Dorchester, Milton and South Boston will discuss plans tomorrow evening at the Pilgrim Church, Upham's Corner, for celebrating Dorchester's 300th birthday next year.

This will be the second time these nine organizations have come together for mutual understanding and for co-operative action. Last year the gathering was called in connection with a visit of Congregationalists from England. The speaker tomorrow evening will be the venerable and much beloved minister, the Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, who will talk on "Past and Present." A united choir of 150 voices will make the musical program notable. Churches combining are:

First Evangelical Congregational Church of Milton, Rev. G. Edwin Woodman, minister; Second Church in Dorchester, Rev. Vaughan Dabney and Rev. Edwin E. Allen, Jr., ministers; Phillips Congregational Church of South Boston, Rev. Howard A. Morton, minister; Village Congregational Church, Dorchester, Rev. George Hibbert Driver, minister; East Congregational Church of Milton, Rev. Horace G. Robson, minister; Congregational Church of Neponset, Community Church, 1927, Rev. SMALL HOMES DECLARED WANING

New York, June 8—The passing of the vine clad cottage in favor of the "skiff dwelling" apartment house, is seen in an analysis of building figures just completed by the Lawbeck Corporation. For the first time in history, the survey reveals, new apartment construction in 1928 exceeded in number of units the construction of one and two-family dwellings.

"Analysis of government building reports," said the survey of the Lawbeck Corporation which specializes in short term loans for building construction, "showed that since 1921 there has been a steady decline in the percentage of homes provided in single and two-family houses, while a corresponding increased percentage has been registered by apartment units.

In 1921, 73.6 per cent of the homes provided were in single and two-family dwellings, compared with 24.4 per cent in apartment house structures. By 1928, however, only seven years later, this ratio was reversed, showing only 46.3 per cent in single and double dwellings against 53.7 per cent in apartment buildings.

SERVANT PROBLEM FACTOR

"The trend in the larger cities and their contingent territory is now decidedly toward the type of living accommodations provided by the modern apartment. This condition is the natural outgrowth of the present-day desire on the part of women of all classes to maintain interests outside the home.

"Coupled with this reluctance to engage in tedious domestic duties, the very real servant problem has also played a large part in the gradual passing of the private home.

"Two entirely different—and in some respects contrasting—developments have united in bringing about the increased degree of apartment house building. First of these lies in the fact that increased traffic congestion has favored the construction of apartment houses located within walking distance of the city's business district, so that many very large apartment developments have taken place in the near in sections, such as the immediately east of the Grand Central Zone in New York and the 'Streeterville' section north of Chicago's Loop.

BOSTON A LEADER

"The second factor—perhaps equally important—is the tendency of suburban dwellers to prefer the convenience of apartment house living to the responsibility of a private house. As a result of this second tendency, there has been a large volume of apartment house construction in outlying and suburban centers which formerly were given almost entirely to individual homes."

The survey stated that San Francisco, Boston, Chicago and Washington have been large apartment building cities, but since 1923 New York has held the lead in this type of housing until today more than 50 per cent of its residential construction is for the accommodation of apartment dwellers.

Apartment building is also on the increase in the great private home building cities of Philadelphia, Baltimore, Los Angeles, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Milwaukee.

Building Site at Peabody in Sale

Henry W. Savage, Inc., has resold for Annie Weiner to Abraham Kaplan, the property at 17 Main st., Peabody, consisting of 6872 sq. ft. of land, assessed for $42,800. The new owner plans to demolish the building and erect a modern block of stores

Why I Believe in West Roxbury Realty

By R. T. FOWLER

"As a fast-growing section of single homes, mostly occupied by owners, West Roxbury is one of the most desirable sections in which to invest in home ownership," is the belief of Robert T. Fowler, Jamaica Plain and West Roxbury real estate broker and builder of homes.

"Because of the high, dry location of West Roxbury," continued Mr. Fowler, "this section has been declared one of the most healthful districts in metropolitan Boston, an item of considerable significance to the property owner rearing a family.

"West Roxbury's high schools, classical schools and playgrounds and transportation facilities, the splendid streets well shaded with trees, its large home sites which insure plenty of light and air to its owners, together with the high class citizenship, assure this section of endless development and progress," Mr. Fowler said.

"West Roxbury is the leader of Boston suburbs in home building in recent years. It is estimated that the district has contributed about 50 per cent of the total home building in the city of Boston in the past five years.

"About $42,000,000 of a total $70,000,000 is credited to West Roxbury. The sum of residential building in recent years is as follows: 1924, $10,500,000; 1926, $17,000,000; 1928, $14,000,000; 1927, $14,500,000, and for last year $14,500,000."

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Chance for Boys and Girls to Work in Vacation

Employers throughout New England will find a new service in the pages of the Boston Evening American, one of value to them and of equal value to hundreds of ambitious high school and college boys and girls.

The practice of making school and college vacations part of a program of real preparation for life's work is growing year by year. Young folks are no longer content to dawdle through the summer months in aimless idleness.

The Boston Evening American has undertaken to act as intermediary between New England employers and these young people who wish to do some useful work during the summer. The service is entirely free to both parties concerned. Employers are invited to write to the Boston Evening American and describe the type of temporary help to whom they can offer vacation employment.

Out of the thousands of high-minded students available, they will be sure to find valuable helpers.

Conditions at Savin Hill Beach to Be Remedied

One of the most urgent public needs of Boston is prompt construction of sewer extensions in Dorchester Bay so as to eliminate the pollution of Savin Hill Beach.

In asking the City Council to ratify the recent legislative act authorizing the city to borrow $450,000 outside the city's debt limit, Mayor Nichols points out that the Old Colony Boulevard has been constructed in such a manner as to shut off the free flow of the tides to the beach.

It becomes immediately necessary, for the sake of the health of the entire community, to extend the Freeport and Kimball street sewer outlets to Fox Point.

The huge new conduit will empty into deep water far out beyond the new traffic boulevard. It is gratifying to know that conditions at the beach will soon be remedied.

Books Changing Character

A Boston publisher, explaining the voluntary censorship of a translated best-seller, points out the handicaps under which book publishing houses labor, with the constant menace of official censorship of newly edited works involving huge investments in time and money.

One of the gratifying features of the present high tide of general book reading is the change in character of popular fiction. No longer are we deluged with garish slum stories glorifying the swindler, the yegg, the gun-man and the taker of human life. Books on crime are at the height of popularity, but they are of the detective type.

The stress is now on the apprehension of the criminal. The author assumes that the reader is interested in the solution of crime and the protection of society. This is in agreeable contrast to the offerings of a few years ago, in which the reader was supposed to thrill at the desperate deeds of those beyond the law, and to glory in their escape from punishment.

A Comet in a Barrel

Professor Eddington, deep scientist, of Cambridge, England, says space is not empty. "The stars move through the universe in an interstellar cloud, about as thick as one puff of smoke would be in a cube ten miles square.

Men Came Suddenly

Dr. Breasted of Chicago University told learned scientists in Philadelphia that man appeared on the earth "rather suddenly." He was not created with all other animals, birds, insects and fish in six days. "Suddenly" means in the course of one hundred thousand years or so.

They are due to remain and struggle on for hundreds of millions of years more. Plenty of time to try out prohibition, get rid of war and replace competition with emulation.

Backless Bathing Suits

The absorbing subject of backless bathing suits fails to stir either the ire or the enthusiasm of Michael H. Crowley, genial superintendent of Boston's police department. He's just going to wait and see what happens when the season reaches its height, the superintendent hints. Meanwhile he's keeping cool.

It is possible, though, that another vigilant watchman will have something to say about the reckless exposure. Old Sol has a way of raising blisters along with the injection of ultra-violet rays, even when he seems to be behind a cloud.

Just a Thought

It is a disgrace to this country, a disgrace to its financiers, and to that usury promoting institution, the Federal Reserve, that Americans should borrow money at rates hitherto paid only by bankrupt nations, bootleggers and third mortgage BORTOWERS.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 8—Many beautiful young girls in New York to all appearances take the easiest way, but are, as a matter of fact, "good girls." While they skate dangerously on thin ice, they are not ostracized, chiefly because of the looseness of metropolitan conventions.

To the world they appear to be old men's darlings, but are in some instances merely companions, and appease the ache of loneliness that so frequently comes to rich and aged widowers and bachelors. The attachments are purely platonic. Ladies must live, and the lonely must have companionship.

In exchange for their companionate service many girls are on salaries as fixed as those of stenographers and privatae secretaries. They go out to dinner, the play or opera whenever invited and the rest of the time is their own without restrictions.

Indeed, some are in love with other men and often marry them. Such attachments are peculiar to large centers where congestion paradoxically creates isolation. Elderly men in New York are not able to form the friendly contacts of smaller communities.

The rich old gazabo is not without his vanity. He not only enjoys squiring about the beautiful, well-dressed and cultured girl, but he is flattered by being seen in her company. And there are enough cultured girls of this sort who do not care a fig for conventions.

There is one dodderer of a Fifth Avenue club whose private pay roll includes three girls of this sort. He takes one out for the evening one week and another the next, and so on. Each knows about the other, and the arrangement is strictly a commercial one.

This indulgence is said to cost him $30,000 a year—a $10,000 salary for each. For many years a millionaire widower has escorted a talented actress to gay gatherings. He has no thought of marriage, nor has she. They are rare friends. She receives $20,000 annually, and will share in his estate.

* * *

A few blocks eastward from Park Avenue is a collegiate speakeasy that is a high spot for campus outings destined to miss chapel the morning after. It is in an old house, and there is a room lined with Heidelberg steins. Slap a collegian with a bar towel or give him two beers and he'll fidget if he cannot sing a drinking song and beat a tankard against a table top. Over the bar are pennants from all over, and bartenders exhibit a neat collection of pledged frat pins. The manager is a college man and interviews all the unknown before admitting them. Two uke strummers sing nooda songs to heighten the "atmosphere."

Speakeasy backrooms these days resemble the saloon backroom of other days. There is the sallow, shirt-sleeved piano player with the inevitable cigarette drooping from loose lips, and those buxom blondes who sing tear-jerking melodies so touching in mawkish sentimentalities. There is sawdust on the floor, the odor of stale drinks and the hanging fumes of cigarette smoke. To heighten the ancient cameo, a cop drifts in now and then, has his drams behind the door, and moseys away.

The "Frankie and Johnny" song is still a favorite of the speakeasy backroom. No one seems to know just how many verses there are to the jovial and ribald ditty. But this singer in West 48th st. is able to sing 137 verses. And that, no matter how sloshed you are, is almost enough.

The electric auto sign across the Broadway frontage of the Claridge Hotel pays $80,000 a year rental. The tooth paste ad with so many slogans, at the head of Times Square pays $110,000 a year. High lights, as it were.

Mrs. Solomon Says—

By HELEN ROWLAND

MY daughter, unless the Inventory of the summer wardrobe readeth like a wine list, say not I am all SET!

For what protests in a damsel, though she possess 17 trunks filled with purple and fine linen and glad rags, and have not a drinking garment amongst them?

Verily, it hath not yet appeared when we shall add thereto a home brew outfit, a soup ensemble, a rum punch peignoir, a mint julep jacket, a moonshine robe de nuit and pousse cafe pajamas. But in good time all these shall, peradventure, grace a lovely woman's trousseau.

For lo, these are the sweet, glad days of prohibition, when all the world speaketh and thinketh in LIQUIDS!

And for every hour of the day there is a favorite libation. And for every drink a garment sacred to its ceremonial—or its memory.

Go to. How DULL was life in the days of wine-bibbing. Yea, verily, it was drier than a Congressman in the presence of a customs inspector and flatter than a last year's alibi.

For then, alas, there was NO "Cocktail Hour," wherein women could foregather and be arrayed as The Drinks of All Nations, and men could exchange wisdom and recipes.

Behold, now, in all time, did the shops an glitter with strange and wondrous conceits! With quaint and beautiful cocktail shakers.

For, alas, the merchants and shopkeepers dwell in darkness. And they do not yet KNOW that this is a Dry Country. Yea, and a nation of fasceites and water-drinkers.

And not EVERY home is a "speakeasy."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"WHY can't the sun shine forever? Why must the rain fall? Why does desire pass? Why do illusions fade?"

That's A. J. W.'s problem and he wants an answer. So do most of us.

We all spend a good portion of our days kicking at rainfalls and pessing at sunsets and whining because soap bubbles bust in our hands. Life is just one disillusionment after another. The girl that drove us mad with desire yester day is a pain in the neck today. The house or the car or the job that we thought would fill our cup of happiness to the brim soon palls us—leaving us as dissatisfied as ever. And like A. J. W. we conclude that life has cheated us.

"Why should we be given all these fine feelings—love, desire, ambition, curiosity, the ability to appreciate beauty—if they are all to end in pain and futility," we cry. "Somebody has double-crossed us!"

Somebody has. But I suspect that it's We—Ourselves!

Is life wrong—or is it our interpretation of it that is wrong?

Have we hung the wrong meaning on things?

We dread change, loss, disappointment. We think of these as peculiarly as painful scourges. We meet them with wheezes or grim determination or resigned sniffles about "bearing our crosses." But are these difficult experiences "crosses"—or are they simply phases of normal growth?

We don't consider it a tragedy when a child loses its baby teeth. Yet we raise Cain when we, in later years, experience various losses which are as infantile as baby teeth. Loss is nearly always the prelude to growth, but we refuse to recognize that fact.

Life changes—we must move along—and how we yell when the traffic signal changes! But would we prefer the life that never budges from us put—the mind that never alters its attitudes or opinions? There are lives and minds like that. They are often very happy minds. They are never afflicted by change or disillusionment. They chuckle and bubble happily to themselves in their padded cells in insane asylums. Would we really like to change places with them? Isn't it better to pay the price of pain for growth and sanity?

This is not a Pollyanna article. There is nothing more contemptible than spineless resignation to adverse fortune. But let's not add to our miseries by rating as "misfortunes" those experiences which are nothing of the sort.

The sun must set, for such is its cycle. But that does not necessarily imply that night is dreadful. We have made night seem dreadful by our fear—and changes seem dreadful by our ignorance and laziness. But they are simply steps on the trail of growth. And perhaps that darker night of death is frightful only because we have read horror into its silence. I may, in truth, be but the lovely prelude to a happier dawn.

"For now we see through a glass darkly," said he.

There is a shadow on the scene—but we have put it there by our own dullness!

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

College professor instructs his demon pupils that only way to succeed in life is to be a snob.

That's K. O., too. The next time we go into a store and buy a hat we are going to demand an extra pair of pants with it.

When we purchase a necktie we will insist on an extra raccoon coat tossed in the bargain.

He tells his neatly educated boys to ride in the best cars, eat the best food and to join the best clubs. Do not associate with the common people or scoff in one-armed lunchrooms.

Be brutal to servants. If you are on a sinking boat and they yell, "Women and children first," tell your wife's dog and tell her you will be back in a minute.

If a starving man asks you for a meal have him arrested for attempted extortion.

Humility is an unforgivable virtue when compared with the excellent qualities of contempt, haughtiness and triple extract of snobbery.

Crash into society even if you have to play a saxophone.

Being a snob is the way to success. The only fault we can find with the professor's advice is that you would have to wear a catcher's mask for the rest of your life.

And after graduating from the professor's college you would have to go to the insane factory for a post-graduate course.

Our advice to the young men who listened to the professor's advice is to club together and give the Prof. a loving cup made out of the half of a cocoanut.

And give the other half of the cocoanut to another ape.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THESE are the things I love: the light
That dances on the quiet lake
When day has gone and crooning night
Leaves only wind and stars awake,
Soft music and the sudden fires
Youth, laughter, all the glad desires
The world's gay magic can im part.
So many things I love; at dawn
The murmur of the willow leaves,
Bright wings that flutter and are gone,
The wren's small nest beneath the eaves;
The lilting of a toneful flute,
That drift along a silent street,
Beauty and all its bright pursuit,
And memory with its echoes sweet.
So many things I love, yet oh,
When danger pauses at your door
The little loves I treasured so,
Forgotten, beckon me no more!
My only hope lies in your eyes,
My only joy in on your lips!
